INTRODUCING

In spite of the connotations of "campus life," the phrase is perhaps descriptive of one of the most significant aspects of modern American life.

CAMPUS LIFE

Here on the campus the youth of a nation is offered an opportunity to come to a complete understanding of itself and the world about it.

EPILOGUE ✓ ✓ ✓ ✓ ✓

THE reputations of Colleges and Universities are established by administrations, faculties, and libraries. But all the genius, labor and money expended in the erection and maintenance of institutions of higher learning is so spent that the students may receive strength, courage, and enlightenment. Universities exist for, and only for, students. Since the execution of Socrates for alleged mal-influence upon the youth of Athens, the world has realized that in their youth, and particularly that portion of the youth which apply at institutions of higher learning for enlightenment, lies the future of mankind.

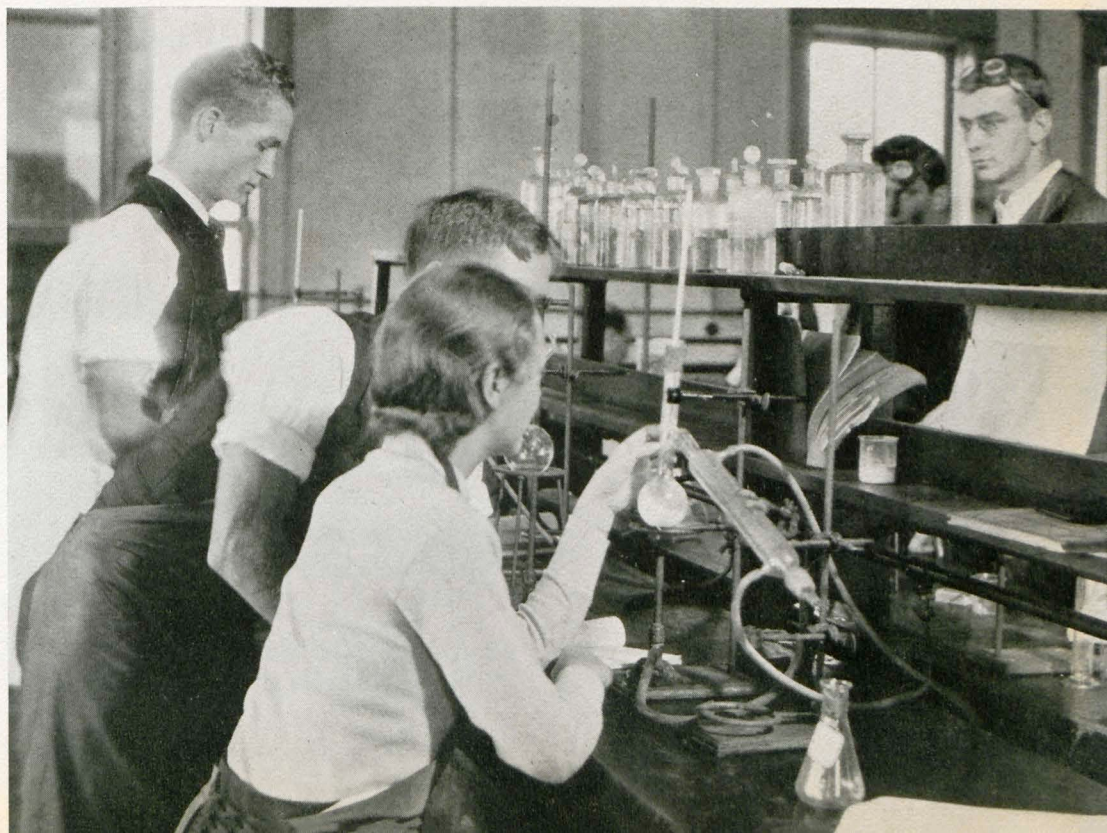

Students form an integral part of contemporary American culture. Their part is one which has been perhaps glorified over much; but this regrettable over-glorification has not lessened the actual importance of student life in American institutions. Rather has it served harmfully to call attention to the trivial aspects of student life which are not conducive to a proper realization of the importance of student activities.

In contemporary America, colleges and institutions provide the only salutary source and environment for the pursuit and acquisition of knowledge pertaining to the humanities. Disturbing influences are prominent in our world condition. Youth cannot but be curious, both as to the past and to the future.

And this curiosity—a “higher curiosity”—characterizes the American students of 1933. New philosophies, new points of view in the consideration of an ever changing universe, must emerge from the chaos of a too long post-war culture. And it is from the students, now resident in our universities and colleges, that these new philosophies and points of view must emanate. Theirs is an enormous responsibility, one that must be realized and fulfilled. In recognition of this responsibility and in recognition of the importance in the social order which this responsibility implies, this book has been formed.

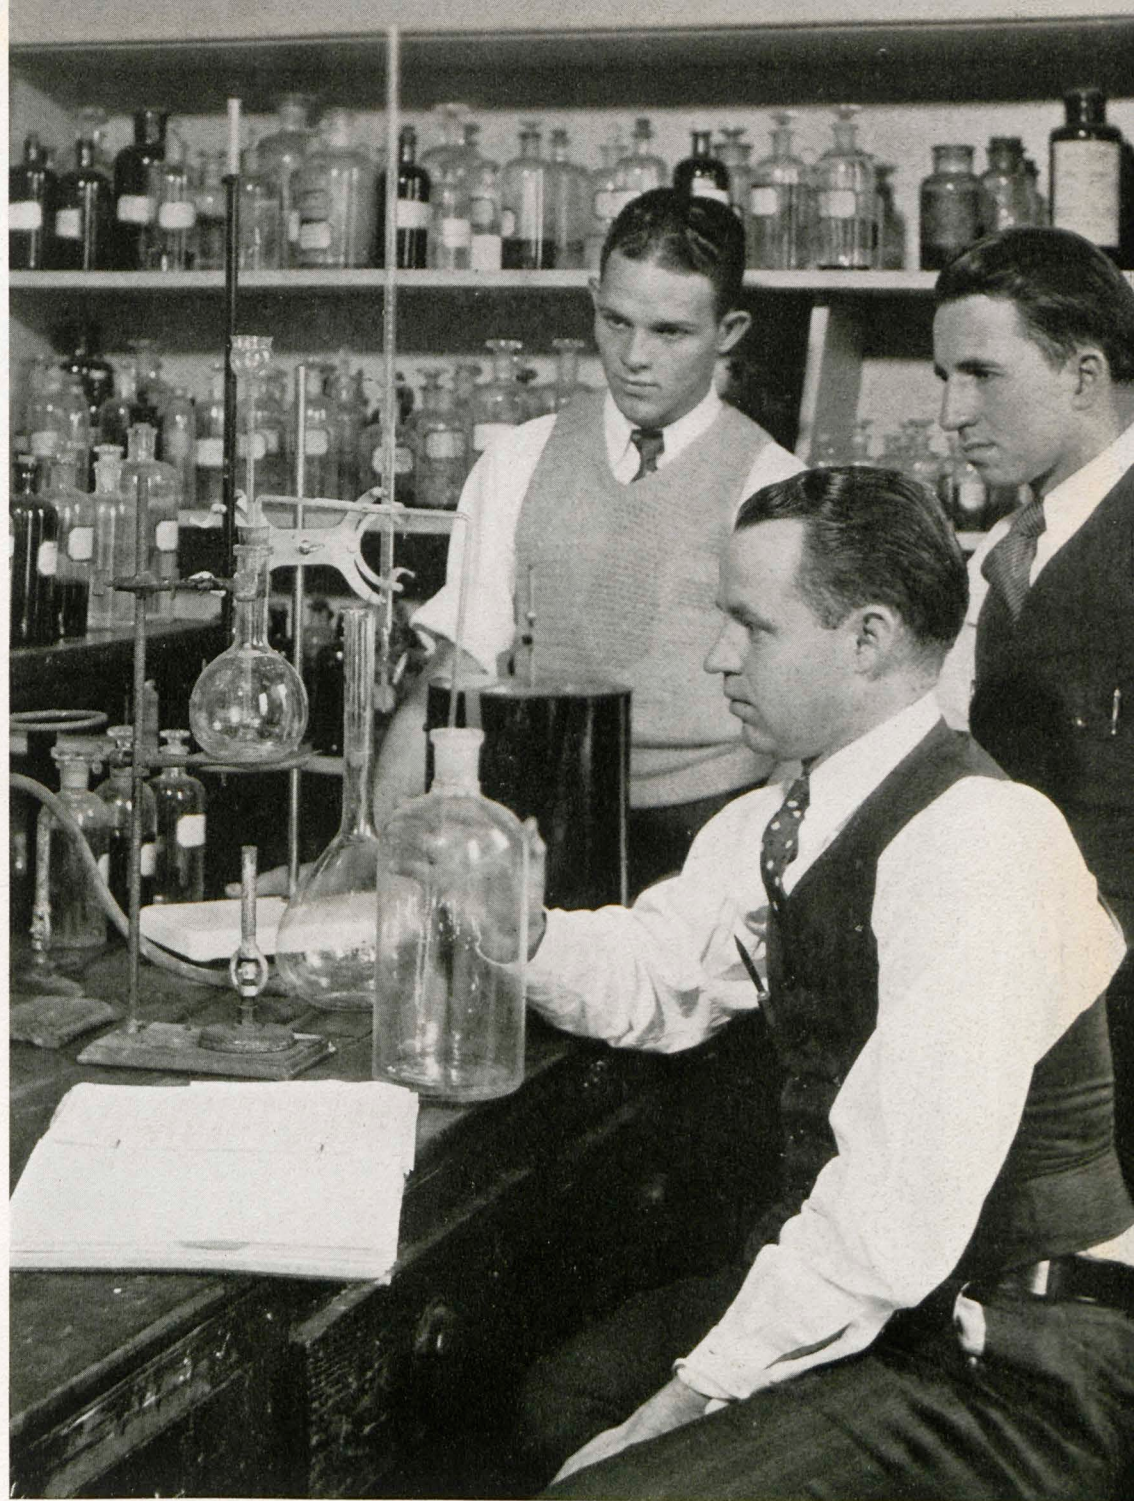

—The Editor.

PRESIDENT OF UNIVERSITY

PRESIDENT JOHN CLINTON FUTRALL
UNIVERSITY OF ARKANSAS

THE birth of the state university idea, and the rise and growth of state universities in America, constitute one of the most remarkable developments in the history of education. In the first half of the nineteenth century there existed a few institutions which were known as state universities and which received some help from the state government. It was not, however, until after the passage of the Land Grant Act by the Federal Congress in 1862 that the real development of the American state University began to be accelerated. While some of the great state universities of the United States are not land grant colleges — that is to say they do not comprise as a part of their organization the state agricultural and mechanical college—without question the impetus that was given to the higher education of the masses of the people by the federal land grant act has done more than any other one thing to increase the development of all state universities.

The state university campus is a place where people of all places, of all political parties, and of all religious faiths meet upon a common ground. The state universities as a class have done more to bring higher education within the reach of the masses of the people than any other influence. In most of the states the state university is the dominating institution of higher education.

The University of Arkansas, while founded later than many state universities, and while for the first thirty years or more of its existence being a small and struggling institution, is a typical example of the manner in which American state universities have served their constituencies.

In these trying times that the nation is now facing, the state universities will help to carry on the torch of learning. They will suffer from reduced incomes and they will be unable to make improvements and to carry out expansions which they have been contemplating, and which would be for the benefit of their people. But with the aid of their loyal faculties and their devoted alumni and students they will maintain their service to the public on the highest possible plane, and when the clouds that temporarily obscure the sky have rolled by, they will be found to be in the future, as in the past, among the guiding stars that are leading America on to a greater destiny.

GOVERNOR OF THE STATE

PROBABLY no intelligent citizen in the State of Arkansas, who is interested in the welfare of his state, the nurture and propagation of culture and progressive thinking, and the education of his children and the children of his friends and neighbors, can fail to take an active interest in the progress of the University of Arkansas.

The people of the State can well afford at this time to regard their state university with approving eyes, and welcome comparison of its standard of excellence with that of almost any other state university in the United States. It is only to be hoped that the present unfortunate condition of the state's governmental finances will not be reflected over-much in a depreciation of the university's admirable administration, faculty and equipment. The state appropriations for the university have been measureably reduced; but this can only be regretted: it has been a move dictated by necessity.

GOVERNOR J. M. FUTRELL
STATE OF ARKANSAS

But the University has more than ever the united and intelligent support of every kind but financial—of the entirety of Arkansas' intelligent citizenry: it hoped sincerely that soon a substantial increase in financial support may be possible, that Arkansas' admirable state institution of higher learning may progress, expand, and continue to exercise its salutary effect upon the present and future conditions of the state's culture and social order.

DEAN OF MEN

DEAN G. E. RIPLEY

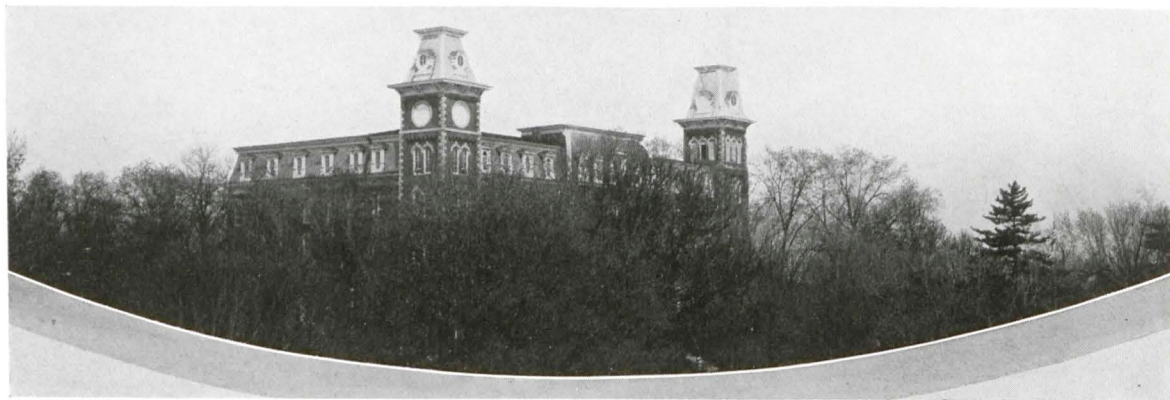

WHEN a certain event seems to be followed inevitably by a certain resultant event, we associate the theory of "cause and effect" with these two events. If, for example, a book is released from the hand, it falls to the earth. Here the force of gravity is the cause, and the acceleration of the falling book is the effect.

In some cases both the cause and the effect may be understood; in other cases the cause may be understood while the effect may not; in still other cases only the effect may be understood; and in some, neither is understood. Consequently, in speaking of this cause and effect relation, we can not absolutely state that one will always definitely follow the other, but from our many observations of nature we can imply that nature will always act in the same manner when the circumstances are the same. Two circumstances, time and place, do not enter into this relation.

Here at the University during the past few years, the workings of cause and effect have become very evident, though in this particular relationship we have entering into it the varying equation of the individual student, and nature has never made this variable into a constant. For this reason, while we know there must be a cause for the very evident effect on the campus, we can only guess as to what it is.

Although I can not be certain as to the reason for the development of this so marked and so worthy effect upon our student body, I do know that it has made our students more serious, more studious, and more sincere, and that this change has been a very decided one for the better.

DEAN OF WOMEN

THE office of the Dean of Women owes its existence largely to the complexity of modern college life.

When women first began to go to college seventy years ago, the question which troubled their friends and neighbors was whether they could succeed in college study, and it was usually the girls with a thirst for knowledge who broke down the barriers of customs and prejudice and forced their way into what was hitherto a man's world.

Today the situation is entirely different. It has become fashionable for the high school girl to go to college and the butterfly and the grind, the rich and the poor, the strong and the weak, the brilliant and the dull come trooping into our universities and colleges each fall with very hazy notions of what it is all about.

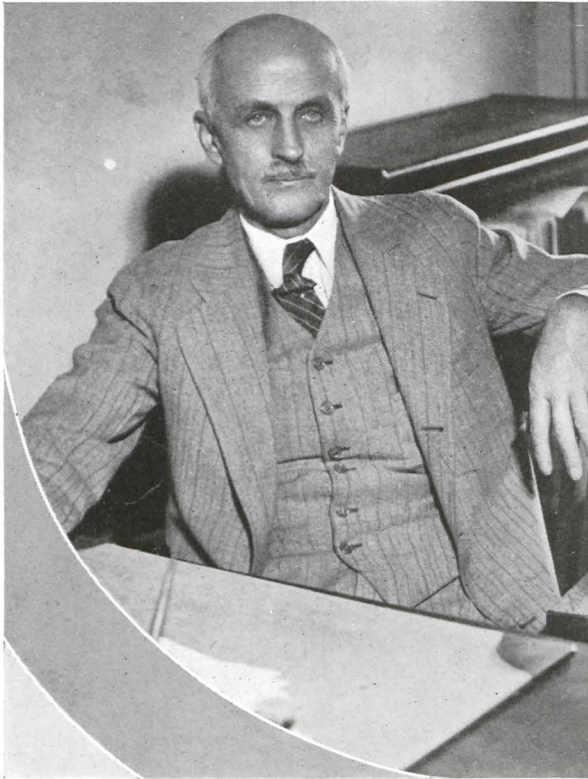

DEAN MARTHA REID

And so it becomes the duty of the Dean of Women to assist the members of this heterogeneous group to adjust themselves in such a way to the world of college life that they may emerge from four years of University training with a balanced development of character, intelligence, and power. To contribute as she is able to this transformation is the task of the Dean of Women.

ARTS AND SCIENCES

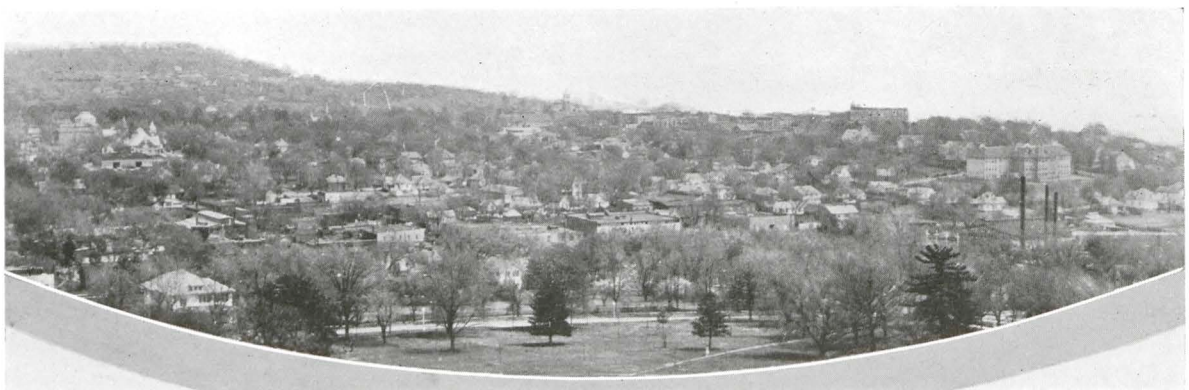

DEAN V. L. JONES

THE College of Arts and Sciences serves two distinct types of students: those who are preparing for entrance into a professional school and those who desire some insight into the fundamental principles of the major divisions of man's knowledge, such as natural science, social science, and literature. The emphasis in both cases is upon principles rather than practical application, though there is some combination of both. The end in view is a certain degree of understanding of the physical, social, and emotional world in and about us, with such mastery of our environment as this knowledge may give.

The course in Liberal Arts is intended for the student who has not yet made a definite decision in regard to his life's work, and who wishes preparation for advanced study or intelligent citizenship. Students in the upper years in technical courses are finding many of the subjects offered by the College of Arts and Sciences valuable in rounding out their education. No students should go through a four-year course in any college of the school without including a reasonable amount of work in literature, history, and similar subjects.

SCHOOL OF LAW

THE School of Law entered on its ninth year with a marked increase in enrollment. For two years the Law School has passed from the category of small law schools and grown into the group of state university law schools of normal size. This year there are eighty-five students in the Law School.

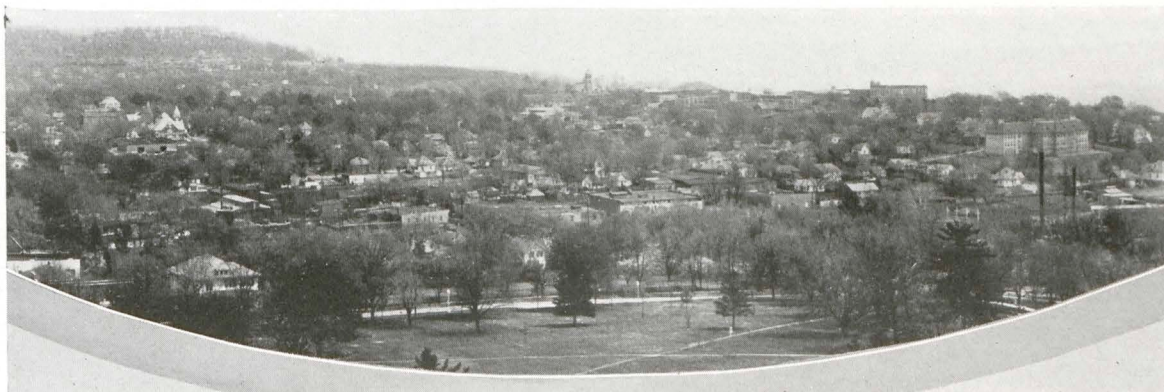

With increased enrollment and the constant growth of the law library, the additional quarters made available in the fall of 1927 became crowded. Facilities which appeared to be adequate for a number of years have become, to some extent, insufficient.

In 1931 the Law School offered its first summer courses. It is hoped to offer in the future a greater variety of law courses, many of which will be of interest to other than law students.

DEAN J. S. WATERMAN

The Law School, in addition to its work on the campus, has continued to keep in touch with the profession over the state by its law bulletins which contain discussions of legal problems of statewide interest. Though the law school is only a few years old, many law graduates are located successfully in the state, much to the pleasure of those interested in the school.

RAZORBACK

COLLEGE OF EDUCATION

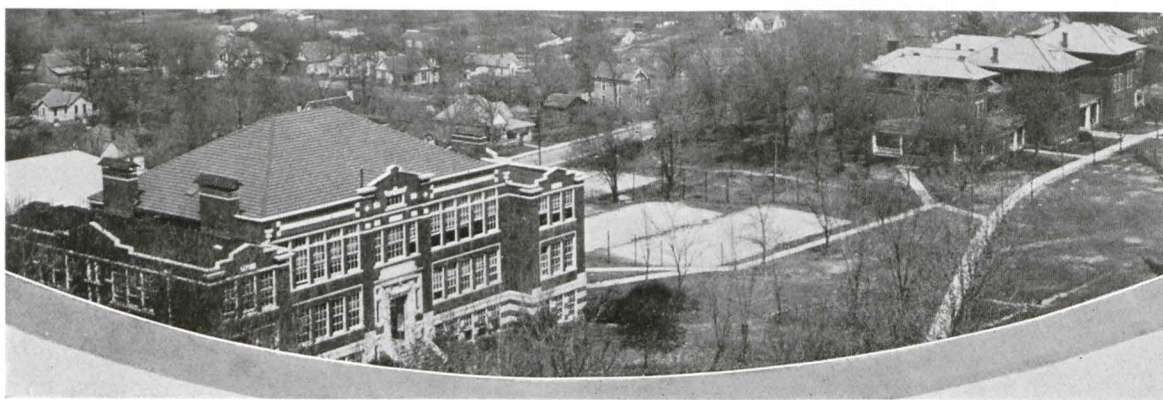

DEAN C. E. PRALL

THE major function of the College of Education with reference to teacher training is two-fold, guidance and preparation. In the preparation of teachers the College depends largely on the subject matter departments of the other divisions of the University, articulating the work of these departments for the needs of the prospective teachers and supplementing their efforts with appropriate courses of a professional nature. In performing the guidance function the College attempts to represent the interests of the prospective teachers in all colleges of the University. While other divisions enroll students who expect to teach, the College of Education is vested with the responsibility for leadership in the University's training program, a responsibility which involves the continuous study of problems of placement and of improved articulation between college preparation and work in the field.

The student teacher is given practical training in practice teaching and they are given certificates, which allows them to teach in the State, when the course is successfully completed.

COLLEGE OF ENGINEERING

AN engineer, in using and utilizing the forces of nature and in directing men, may find his field of usefulness in serving society as a professional engineer, who may teach, engage in research, or, as a professional engineer, advise others. Such men should have mastered the physical sciences and mathematics, and be proficient in some branch of Engineering.

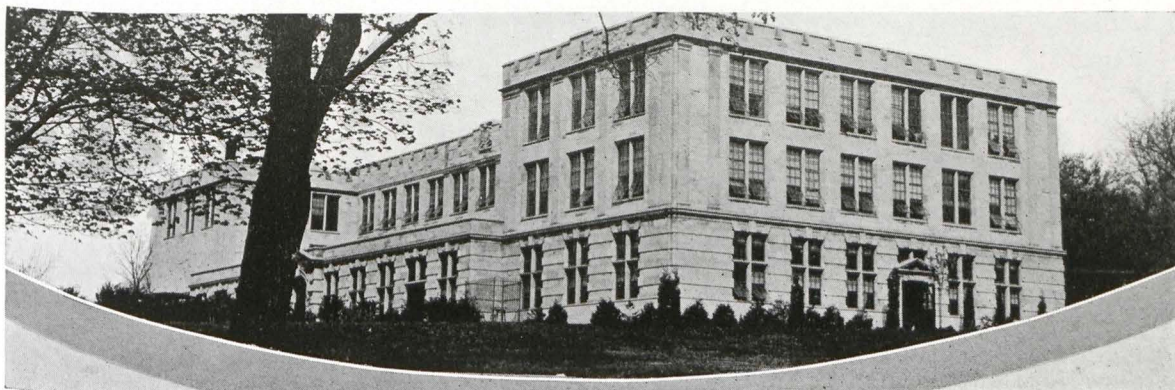

The man with aptitude for engineering, but having a lesser knowledge of the fundamentals, may find useful employment in production or installation of machinery, estimation or appraisal, sales work or operation.

The training one receives in an engineering college fits him for service in a number of fields and should he find himself in some other vocation, the training he has received will be of great benefit to him.

DEAN W. N. GLADSON

Our Engineering College is well equipped for training men in the fundamentals. Our faculty is small in number but every man has been chosen because of his ability and high standing in the field that he represents. Our laboratories, supplied with the best available instruments offer the best opportunities for the graduate student as well as the undergraduates.

COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE

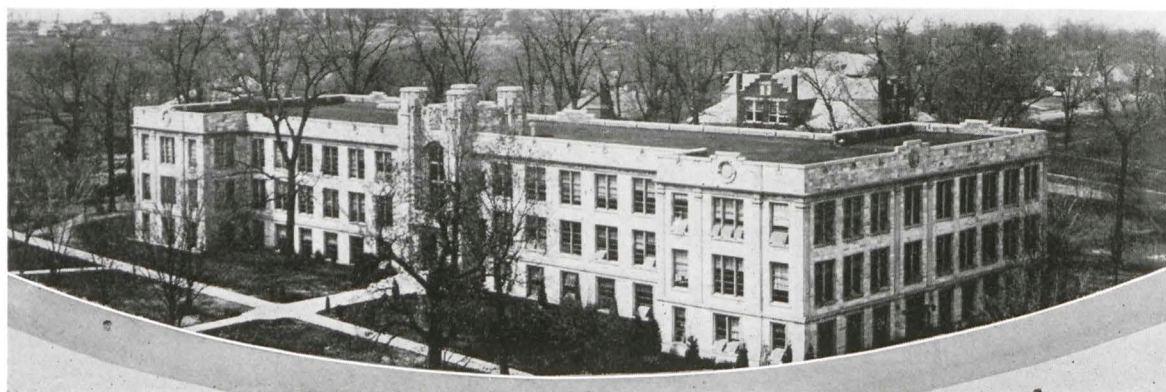

DEAN DAN T. GRAY

THE College of Agriculture of the University of Arkansas is one of the new colleges of the University. The University, as originally organized, was not divided according to present designations. Courses in agriculture were offered almost from the opening—January 22, 1872—of the University, but the College of Agriculture was not established under its present name until 1905, twenty-eight years ago.

As educational matters are reckoned, our College of Agriculture, is, therefore, only a baby. Many other states have similar colleges twice as old as ours and although our College is young it has widespread effect on our state and other states through the work of the students that have graduated. The business of the College of Agriculture does not consist wholly in finding and developing young men and women for leadership in Arkansas, but that is one of its chief jobs. That the job of the developing leadership is being pursued vigorously is evidenced by the fact that the College now has approximately 150 of its graduates in positions of public leadership in Arkansas and still others have a part in the business and agricultural life of the state.

RAZORBACK

COLLEGE OF BUSINESS EDUCATION

THE School of Business Administration offers comprehensive courses of training for men and women planning on business careers. In addition to instruction in the subject matter of accounting, banking, finance, law, management, marketing statistics and so forth, the courses are designed to emphasize the economics principles underlying our complex civilization, to distinguish their bearing on the formulation of sound business policies, and to develop in the student a faculty of analysis and a skill in the solution of business problems. Because business is as broad as life itself, the business curricula include a wide range of liberal and professional courses offered in other divisions of the University.

The viewpoint is managerial. On the executives of concerns throughout the business world have devolved responsibilities for the welfare of peoples, the importance of which has become recognized by all too few social scientists. The benefits of modern industrial organizations are apparent. Interference by political authority is fraught with danger and ultimate loss. Regulation by economic and business experts offers more hope. Through education, it may be reasonably expected that such national plagues may gradually disappear.

GRADUATE SCHOOL

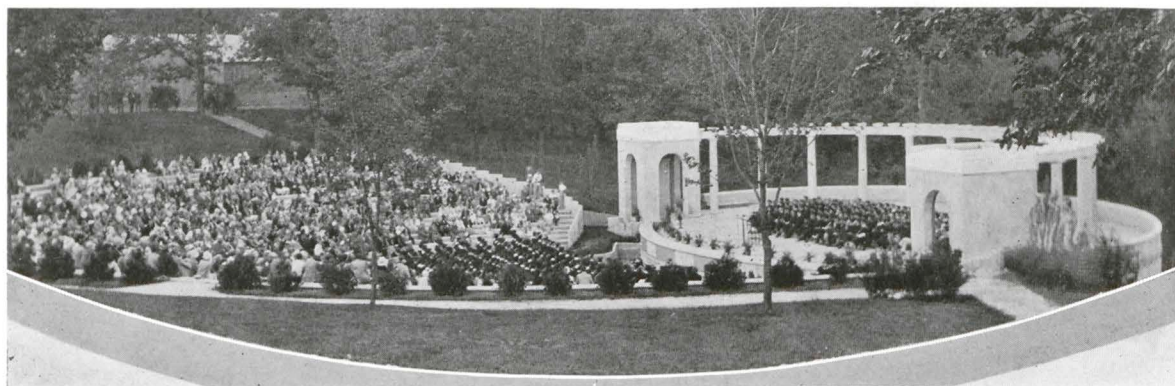

DEAN J. C. JORDAN

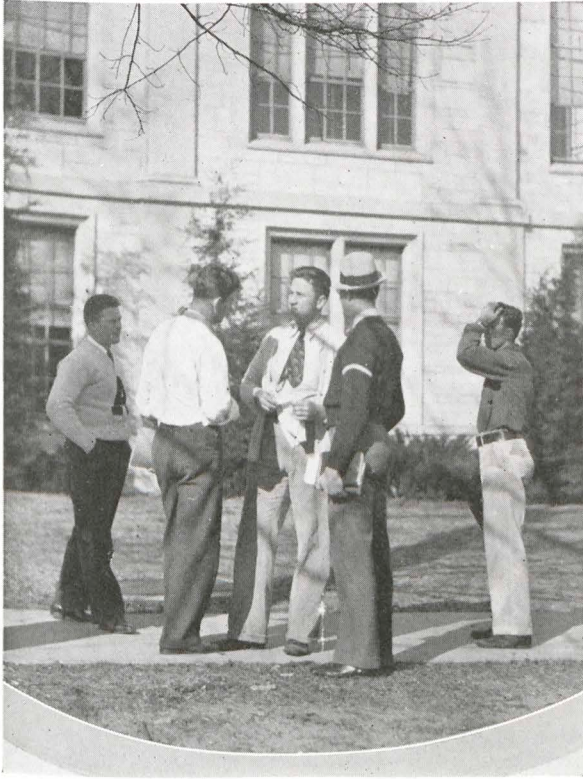

"IF you will look over this booklet, Mr. Brown, I think you will have no difficulty in seeing yourself through this Master's Degree business. You will note in registering you are to confine yourself to two subjects, subjects for which you have had sufficient preparation in advanced undergraduate courses. You will note that you cannot be admitted to candidacy for a degree until after you have proved your ability to carry your course with satisfactory grades.

"You will note that the preparation of your thesis is a most important matter, that you must select your subject with great care, that you must study your method of solution. You will note the comprehensive oral examination which occurs near the end of your course after your thesis is finished.

"Follow the directions in this folder meticulously. You will discover that we are trying to accomplish for you two objects, the acquisition of information in your chosen field of study, and training in the independent methods of study and research."

The Student Senate of the University is the official go-between of the students and the University Senate. All petitions must be presented to the Student Senate, which in turn presents the petitions to the University Senate. One notable concession gained from the University Senate this year was the allowing of Student dances during the twenty-eight-day-law period.

The Student Senate is a representative body composed of students from each of the different schools of the University. Each year this body sends representatives to the National Student Federation of America, an organization that the Student Association belongs to. Joe Chambers and Jim Edmondson represented the University at New Orleans during the Christmas Holidays. The Senate also supervises student election and affairs.

The year 1932-'33 marked the fifth year that student dances have been supervised by the Student Social Committee. All social functions of the University students are under the direct control and supervision of the Student Social Committee. The giving of dates for social functions, conduct at dances, finances, orchestras, and all other details are controlled by this committee.

In drawing up the social calendar, Chambers, with the assistance of Dean Ripley, cooperated with all organizations in the passing out of dates for their respective activities. In this way there is a dance nearly every week end.

Surplus funds are used to send representatives to the Student Federations.

The Carnall Hall Governing Board is composed of representatives from each class. A feeling of good will, fellowship, and loyalty to the ideals of the University are the standards which the board fosters.

The duties of the board are manifold. It has the responsibilities of staging dances, open-house, and other social functions. It prevents unnecessary noise and regulates the use of phones. All infractions of dormitory rules are punished by the board by fining the culprits.

FOOTBALL

The 1932 football season was rather unsuccessful, the team winning one and tying two—losing six. Coach Thomsen was confronted with a rather green bunch of material, yet blessed with a horde of potential Sophomoric stars. However, they did not come up to expectations, and a winning combination was not developed. The injury of Murphy kept him out of the mid-season games and a quarterback could not be found to fill his place. Seven or eight Sophomores could be found in practically every starting line-up. The outstanding feat of the season was the tying of Centenary on Thanksgiving Day, a team that had defeated five of the Conference schools.

VARSITY SQUAD

FOOTBALL SEASON

The University of Arkansas went thru a very unsuccessful season, winning one, tying two, and losing six. The defeat of Baylor at Little Rock was the only Conference win of the season.

The Porkers started the season with only eight lettermen, Capt. Judson Erwin, sub-Capt. Jim Edmondson, Leslie Nations, Lewis Johnson, Louis Stout, Henry Phillips and Joe Chambers, and a host of sophomore athletes. The team played very spasmodically, which resulted in defeat for the Porkers in the early games.

Arkansas	0

Bad breaks and lack of punch to gain yards at the right time accounted for the Porker's start against a small but fighting band of Hendrix Warriors in the opening game here September 24. Ralph LaForge, playing his first varsity game was the outstanding Porker. He ran the ends well and in the second half intercepted a pass and was brought down on the Hendrix six-yard line. The Hendrix line held. Sharing honors with LaForge was Joe Biddle, who was starting his first game as a regular. Biddle's line plunging was outstanding.

Missouri School of Mines . . .	20
Arkansas	19

The Miners beat the Porkers for the first time in eighteen years here, October 1. In the last quarter with the Razor-backs leading 19-6 and the game seemingly won, the Miners, led by Kirchoff, made the two touchdowns and kicked goal twice to come out one point ahead. Again Joe Biddle and Ralph LaForge came through for Arkansas. Biddle made two of the Arkansas touchdowns through the line, while LaForge intercepted a Miner pass and raced 55 yards for his touchdown. The line functioned well for three quarters but went to pieces in the fourth.

Texas Christian	34
Arkansas	12

The Porkers went against their old coach, Francis Schmidt and were beaten 34-12 by his powerful line and swift backfield at Fort Worth, October 8. The first Arkansas score came on a long pass from Tom Murphy to Paul Rucker and the second when Finis Martin, sophomore guard, recovered a fluke fumble. This Porker threat never endangered the T. C. U. lead. The Frogs scored seventeen first downs against five for the Porkers. Blanchard Spearman and "Red Oliver, Christian backs, ran through Arkansas almost at will, while in the line Captain John Vaught, all-American guard, was the best. This was the first game for the Porkers away from home.

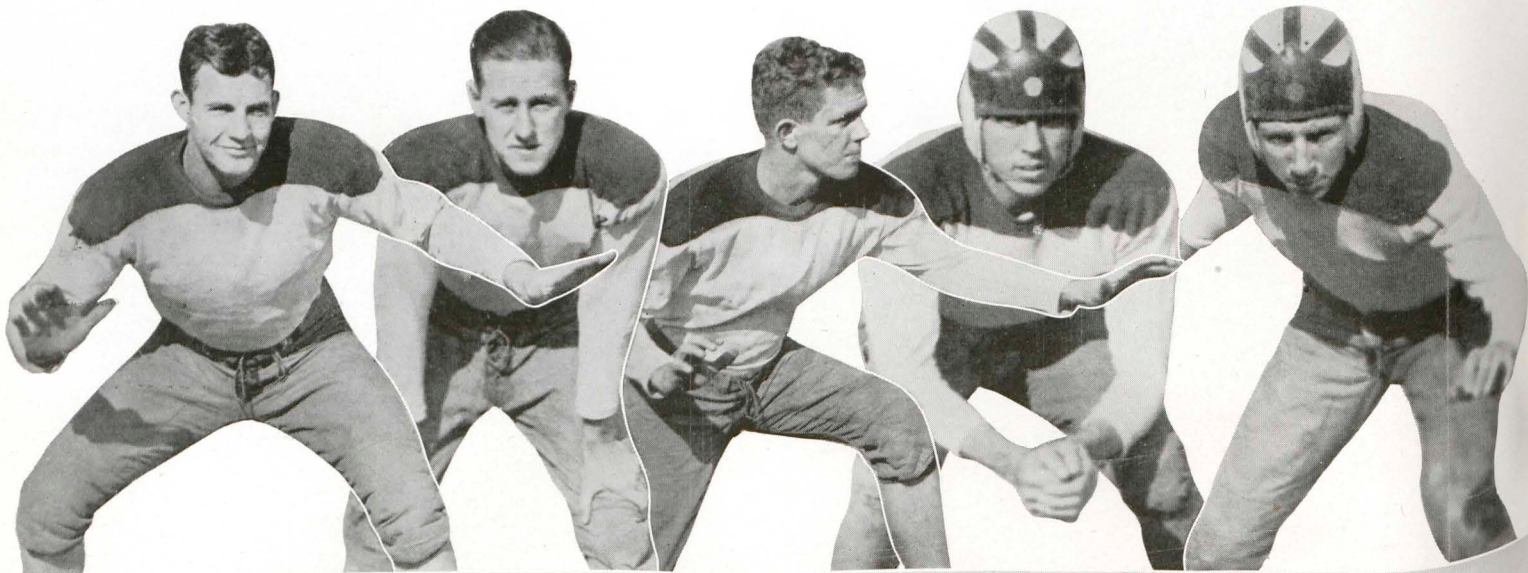

Arkansas	20
Baylor	6

It was an Arkansas Day. Before a large crowd who braved the bad weather to come to Kavanaugh field at Little Rock October 15 the Razorbacks came to life to upset the Baylor Bears, 20-6. Ralph LaForge and Joe Biddle, home town boys, showed their admirers how it was done. Biddle scored one touchdown through the line and LaForge two. LaForge sprinted 85 yards through the entire Baylor team for the third Arkansas touchdown. The lone Baylor touchdown came late in the third quarter after a long drive. Kroney, Reeves, and James were Baylor's outstanding men. "Bloody Jim" Edmondson and Tom Murphy were the other Arkansas stars. About two hundred students and the band made the trip to Little Rock.

L. S. U.	14
Arkansas	0

Two long passes early in the game accounted for the two "Old Lou" scores which beat the Porkers 14-0 October 22 at the opening of the Louisiana State Fair at Shreveport. Biff Jones' boys scored first when Lodbell caught a pass on the four-yard line and Keller plunged over. Another pass, Yates to Fleming, gave the Tigers their other score. Elvin Geiser and Tom Murphy led Arkansas drives into Tiger territory, but the Razorbacks lacked the punch to score.

Rice	12
Arkansas	7

As a pre-game feature the whole school turned out in the rain the Friday night before Homecoming, November 5, to attend the Pep Meeting and bonfire sponsored by the A. B. C. and the Rootin' Rubes. After the meeting the Rice Owls was burned in effigy on the railroad tracks in Shuler town. Before the game Mrs. Thelma Johnson Rees, wife of "Greasy" Ross, Porker fullback, was crowned Homecoming queen. An inspired Razorback machine led the Owls 7-6 for three quarters, before the powerful Rice backs finally put over another marker. Elvin Geiser scored early in the first quarter on a pass from Tom Murphy. Led by McCauley, Thrasher, and Captain Tom Driscoll, the Owl backs pushed over two touchdowns to win the game. A relatively small homecoming crowd saw the game.

S. M. U.	13
Arkansas	7

The Porkers saw another early game prove insufficient to win when the Southern Methodist University Mustangs beat them at Dallas. Biddle got the lone Porker score in the first few minutes of play when he intercepted a fluke fumble. A Pony back was tackled at the line of scrimmage and the ball flew out of his hands into Biddle's who was backing the line. The Ponies' touchdown came as the result of an end run by Travis for the first score and the second on a pass from Travis to Fuqua. S. M. U. completed 10 out of 21 passes, while the Razorback passing attack failed to function. Putrid team work hampered Razorback chances.

Texas	34
Arkansas	0

The big Texas Longhorn aggregation led by Ernie Koy, Harrison Stafford, and John Hilliard, literally walked over the Razorbacks in the last home game of the year, November 18, to the tune of 34-0. The Texans led 14-0 at the half. Stafford proved his all-American rating by playing the outstanding game in the Texas backfield. Koy's passing and Hilliard's broken field running was great. Click Jordan, who was hampered by injuries all season, played his best game of the year. For six Porkers, "Bull" Erwin, Jim Edmondson, Leslie Nations, Louis Stout, Henry Phillips, and Joe Chambers, this was the last game they would play on the home field.

Arkansas	0

In the last game of the season at Shreveport, on Thanksgiving, the Porkers ruined Centenary's perfect season by holding the Gentlemen to a scoreless tie. The rain the day previous slowed up the offense of both teams somewhat. The Razorbacks, no doubt, played their outstanding game of the season, holding the Gents on the one yard line in the first quarter, this being the only threat they made in the entire game. Arkansas had the ball on the three-yard line, with first and goal to go when the half ended. Arkansas also threatened in the third and fourth quarter when they got within Centenary's ten-yard line. The Razorbacks missed a field goal just as the game ended. Tom Murphy's kicking and the running of John Chinn were the outstanding features of the game.

RAZORBACK

GLEN ROSE AND WEAR SCHOONOVER
Coaches

FRESHMEN

Led by a host of high school and junior college stars, the Porker frosh rolled through the 1932 football season, winning one game and tying two.

The first game played here October 22, while the varsity was in Shreveport, the frosh piled up a 91-0 score against the Monett, Mo., Junior college.

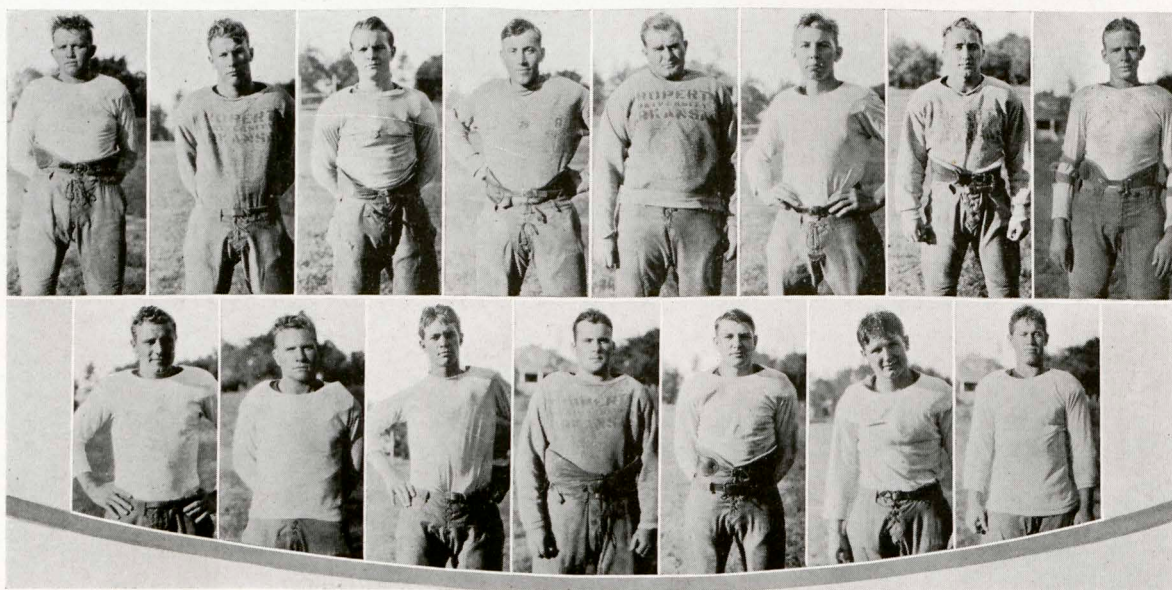

All the scoring was done in the first three quarters of the game. The third period saw the yearlings run across 53 points to end scoring for the day. Eight backs and ends took turns making touchdowns. The scorers and their scores were: Corrotto 2, Cohen 2, Rucker 3, Locke 3, Poole, Keaton, Brockman, and Ferguson.

Coach Glen "Bull" Rose used his entire freshman squad before the end of the game.

In the next game, played at Little Rock under the flood lights, the frosh were held to a 0-0 tie by Monticello A. and M. Leo Corrotto, giant fullback from Fort Smith, did some brilliant kicking during the game.

Doug Locke, diminutive Pig quarterback, played good football against his ex-team mates from Monticello. Fumbles and general ragged playing hurt the frosh chances.

Bad breaks and a fighting bunch of Bacone Redskins held the yearlings to a 6-6 tie, at Muskogee, Okla., on Armistice Day. The Pig's only score came in the fourth quarter as the result of a passing and running attack started by Locke and Ferguson. Two passes from Ferguson to Locke put the ball in scoring distance and Ferguson plunged it over. Locke missed goal. Again the kicking of Corrotto was the feature of the game.

Winning ten games out of twelve, the Porker Frosh basketballers kept up their record under Coach Glen "Bull" Rose of not losing more than two games a season. The games lost were to the powerful Colonial Bakers of Little Rock and to the Rogers Independents. The frosh beat the Independents in a return game.

Herman Ray, red headed all-state high school player from Little Rock, captained the frosh up to the end of the first semester, when he withdrew from school. Garland Wheeler, flashy little forward from Western Grove and former all-state player, was elected to finish the season.

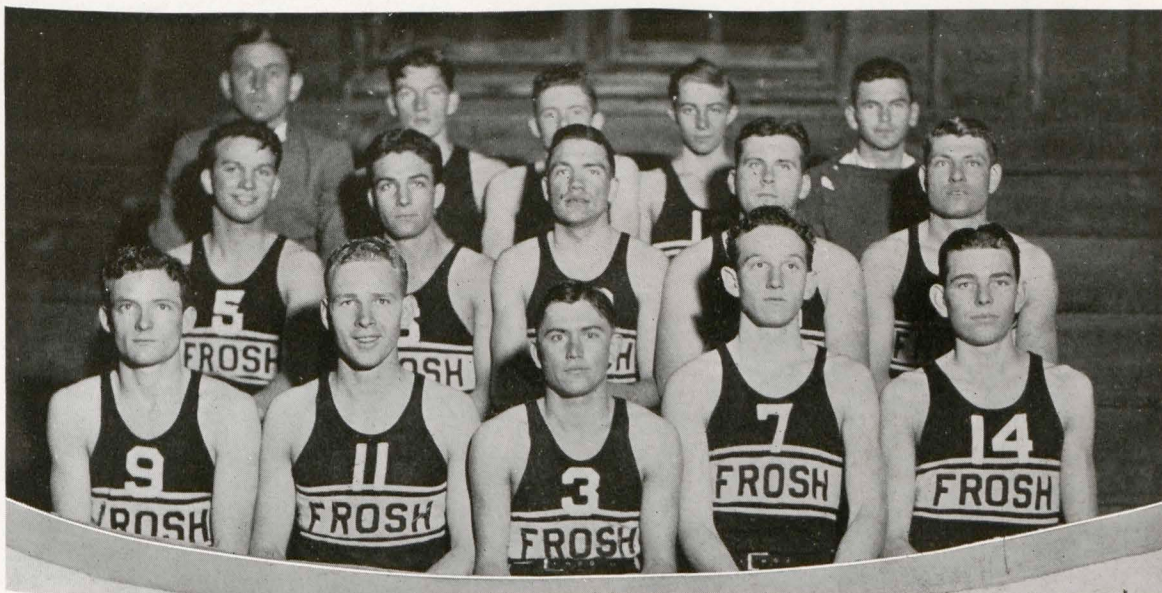

Numerals were awarded to Captain Wheeler, Jack Newby, Herman Seelig, Arthur Wells, James Howell, H. L. Poole, Bob D'sheroon, Bruce Cowling, Earl Hagan, and Bob Cunningham.

JACK NEWBY
Captain

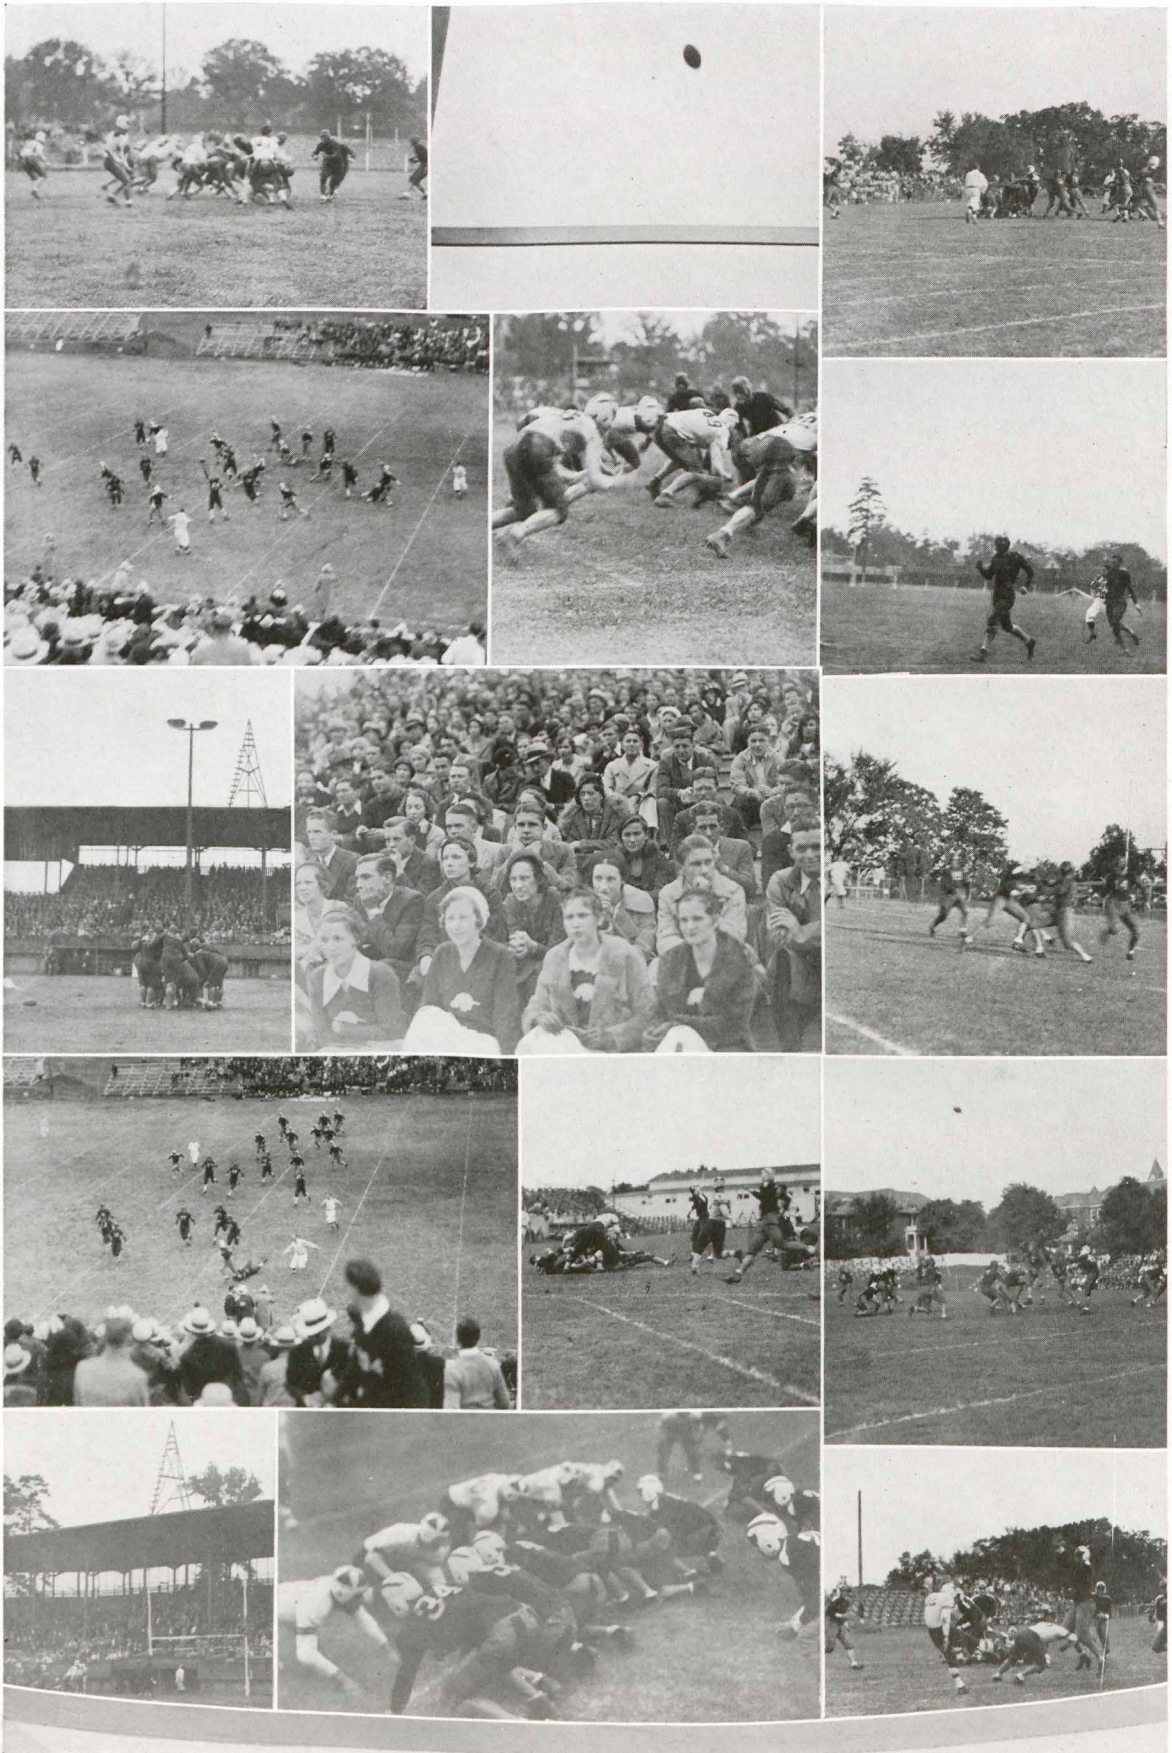

In the game against the Colonial Bakers, the frosh were unable to cope with such polished performers as Jack Caperton, and Billy Dunaway, and lost the game, 45-33. Wheeler, Newby and Poole were good for the freshmen.

The Rogers Independents, in a game at the first of the season, eked out a 33-21 victory over the yearlings. In a return game however the freshmen swamped the Independents 76-39.

BASKETBALL

Given a slight edge by pre-season dope, the University of Arkansas fell below expectations. Mid-season injuries lost valuable men to the team. The services of Brasfield, Sexton and Gibson, lost thru broken hands, was seriously felt by the Arkansas squad. With frequent substitutions of new men, they lacked that old familiar team work, yet worked hard. A number of new faces will be found on next year's squad, in as much as Kendall, Sexton, Murphy, Jelks and Gibson graduate this year. However, outstanding men on the freshman squad will help bolster Arkansas' hopes for a successful season next year.

VARSITY SQUAD

BASKETBALL SEASON

Chuck Bassett's University of Arkansas cagers opened the 1932-33 season at Tahlequah, Okla., where they drubbed the Northeastern Teachers two straight games, 31-16 and 33-20. The game, which was to have been played in Fayetteville, was transferred because of the flu epidemic. Bassett used his whole squad during the series.

CHRISTMAS TRIP

In their annual Christmas trip the Porkers took two out of three games, winning from Nebraska, 41-24, from North Dakota, 33-27, but lost to Creighton in a close one, 29-28. Captain Bruce Kendall, Doc Sexton, and Tom Murphy were outstanding on the trip. Bassett used his squad of ten men freely. Travis Brasfield broke his hand on the trip. In an after Christmas game the Razorbacks beat Tulsa U. at Tulsa, 35-25, in a fairly hot game.

DENTON TEACHERS

The first home games of the season, the Porkers won two straight from the Denton Teachers of Texas, 34-20 and 36-26. Captain Kendall was in form as was Doc Sexton. The Teachers were easily outclassed by the Arkansans and Bassett substituted freely in both games. In the first game of the series, the Rootin' Rubes presented the six senior football lettermen with blankets.

UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS

Arkansas' conference aspirations received a setback January 13 and 14 at Austin where the University of Texas' Longhorns handed the Razorbacks two defeats, 32-28 and 31-28. Fouls in the first game proved costly to the Porkers. In the second game Bassett started nearly a second string lineup, which held the Texans for a while but a last minute spurt proved too much for Arkansas.

RICE DROPS TWO

Showing real conference basketball, the Porkers won their first conference games here from the Rice Owls, 36-32 and 33-23. John "Jelly" Jelks, the Jonesboro "Blond Blizzard," got hot in the first game of the series and put it in the sack early in the game. Murphy and Kendall were outstanding in the second, while Snider and Dixon shone for Rice.

FROGS TAKE A COUPLE

Playing drab basketball and not showing very much, the Razorbacks lost the series to the T. C. U. Horned Frogs, 29-19 and 30-26. Travis Brasfield and Johnny Vaught tied up in the second game and were thrown off the court. The Porkers led at the half but were unable to hold to it for long in the second period.

PONIES DOWNED

Winning the first by a large and the second by Doc Sexton's free shots in the last 50 seconds, Arkansas hung two more victories on their belts. The scores were: first game 40-23, second 26-25. In the second game with 50 seconds to go and trailing by one point, the Porkers won when Doc Sexton sunk two free throws. Kendall and Taft Moody, soph forward, were the big scorers.

TULSA LOSES AGAIN

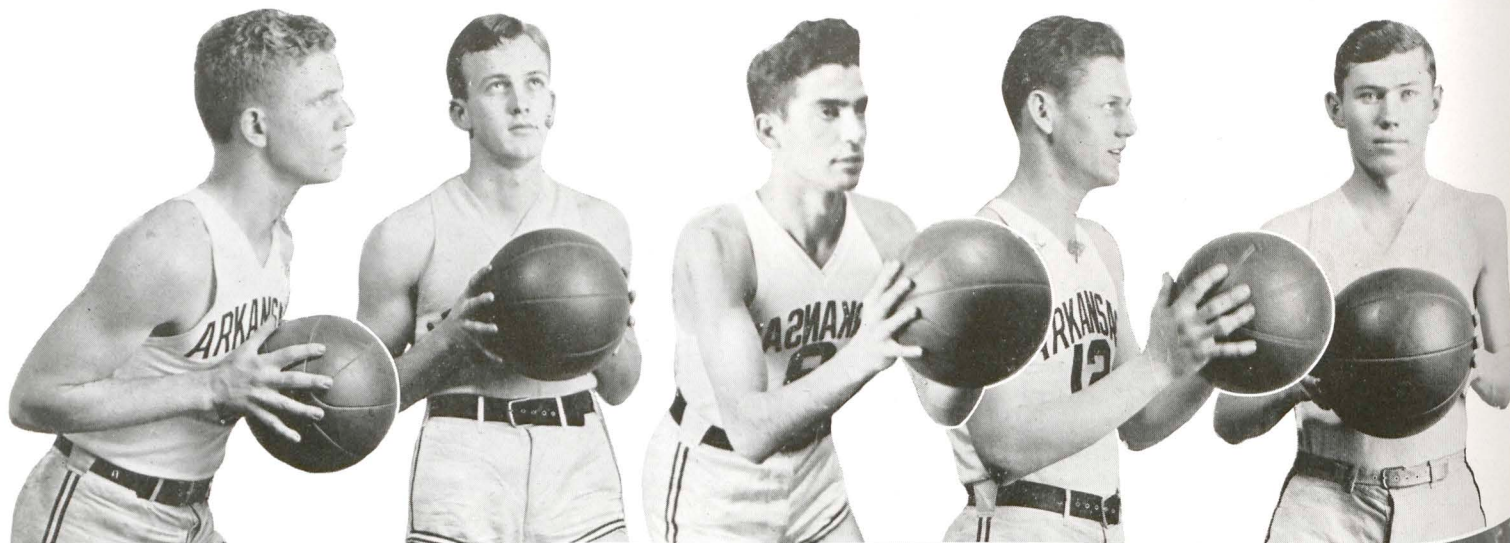

Starting down the home stretch of the season, the Porkers beat Tulsa University for the second time this season, 28-19, in a rather uneventful game. The only time the Tulsans showed anything was in the first two minutes of the game. After that the contest was never in doubt. Thirty-two personal fouls were committed during the game.

AGGIES WIN SERIES

Beating off last minute spurts in both games of the series, the Cadets from A. and M. took two, 25-21 and 25-23. In both games Tom Murphy was the whole show for Arkansas. Besides doing most of the guarding he was a power in working the ball down the field. Moody and Merka were best for the Aggies.

BAYLOR WINS CLOSE SEASON FOR PORKERS

With Taft Moody, sophomore forward, making 32 points in both games, Chuck Bassett's Razorbacks won the final games of the season here against the Baylor Bears, 34-19 and 39-20. Sexton, Gibson, and Brasfield were out of this series with broken hands and Bassett was forced to use nearly a sophomore team. Kendall, Murphy, Jelks, Gibson, and Sexton saw their last games under Arkansas colors.

HAZORBACK

OTHER SPORTS

TRACK

The University of Arkansas track and field team, under the direction of Fred Thomsen, finished a very successful season at Austin, Texas, where they entered the Southwest Conference meet. Starting the season with a mediocre looking squad, Thomsen developed a very successful team that won a majority of their meets.

In the first meet of the year held at Rolla, Mo., the Razorbacks barely nosed out the Miners by a margin of 69-67. The Porkers captured eleven first places, LaForge, dash artist, taking first in the 100- and 220-yard dashes. The events in which the Pigs captured first are as follows: broad jump, pole vault, javelin, discus, shot put, and half-mile relay. LaForge was high point man for the meet.

In the next meet, with the Springfield Teachers, the Razorbacks were smothered by a strong and experienced squad of trackmen. Barker and Geiser did the best work for the Porkers. Geiser leaped over 22 feet to win the broad jump while Barker crossed the line ahead of the Teacher candidate to win the 440-yard dash.

On April 14, Arkansas' trackmen engaged in a triangular meet with Hendrix and Ozark at Clarksville, and were able to ride through the meet with a very commanding lead. Arkansas piled up 79 points in taking nine first places. LaForge, Geiser, Gower, and Barker gave creditable performances for the University.

Arkansas attended the Kansas Relays at Lawrence April 22, and made quite a successful showing. The University has also engaged Tulsa University in a track meet.

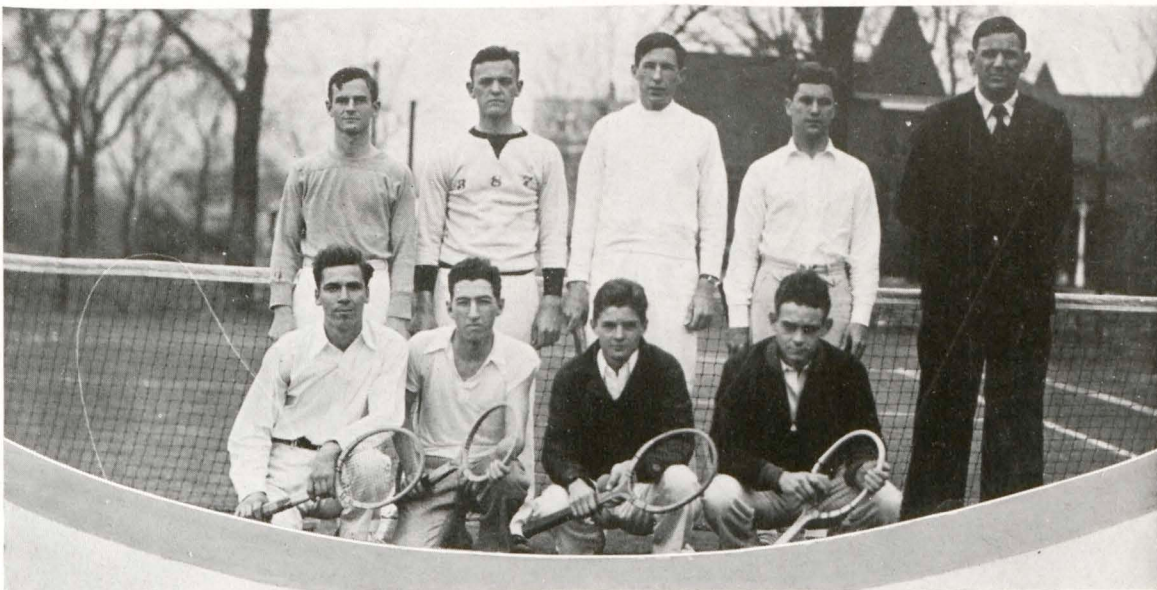

TENNIS

This year, as in years past, the University of Arkansas Tennis team, under the successful guidance of Coach Glen "Bull" Rose, has smashed through its opponents to win a majority of their engagements. Led by Captain Tom Lovett, diminutive over and underhand artist, the Porkers netmen have bested Springfield, Missouri Teachers, and Drury College. Several other meets were contemplated, but due to inclement weather, some of them had to be cancelled.

Assisting Captain Lovett are three of last year's lettermen, Jerio Cabell, J. Scott Rogers, and James Terry. Cabell is from a long line of crack tennis players and is a hard man to conquer. His smashing drives are tricky and very hard to return. Rogers, an easy going loft artist, plays a heady, smooth, and cruel game. Terry, the ace of freshmen numeral men of two years ago, plays a hard game, slashing and driving with all of his 140 pounds.

Credit and much credit must be given to Coach Rose who has taken the green lads and rounded them into fairly accurate bunch of sharpshooters. Rose, himself a crack tennis player, has had the team now for three years and each year has seen him in the top row with his tennis players. Prospects for next year's team are very good, since Rogers, Cabell, and Terry will be eligible to compete again. It is possible that "Gash" Lovett may return and add his name to the rostrum. Anyway, under Rose, Arkansas is due to have a successful team.

The Editors of the 1933 RAZORBACK have endeavored to edit a popular annual. In attempting to accomplish this, we have tried to change the book in every way possible. We have tried to break away from all forms of preceding books, hoping, thereby, to perpetuate our annual as a popular one. To meet student approval has been the impelling motive behind each labor that we have invested in this volume.

Forces beyond our control, however, have worked in direct opposition to us. We felt that the burden of the student should be lightened, and by lowering the price of pictures from three dollars to two dollars, we deprived ourselves of finance that would have assisted enormously in giving you a better annual. Nevertheless, under the circumstances, we have done our best. And to the owners of the book, the students, we may say that we shall feel flattered and that our time and actions will have been placed to a good purpose, if they are pleased with the book.

The theme is our best bet. We think that it should prove to be a prime factor in catching your favor. The students that we have selected are ones that are representative. In short, we have tried to give you a year-book that will compare favorably with any in this section of the country. And finally, we have at least given you the 1933 RAZORBACK—the RAZORBACK that IS different.

We have many people who have labored industriously, to thank. First, we wish to thank Mr. W. J. Lemke of the Journalism Department, who took the pictures that you see on the opening and division pages. In addition to donating his time, Mr. Lemke gave many valuable suggestions as to the composition of the pictures. Next we wish to thank Mr. R. C. Walker and Mr. Edward K. Burns of the Southwestern Engraving Company for their labors in aiding with the planning of the book. Finally we wish to thank Mr. Todd Ellis of the Russellville Printing Company, who assisted in placing the book in your hands as early as it was.

The Arkansas Traveler is a strange and peculiar thing, and is a fearful thing to edit. It is published in a situation badly in need of remedy; that is, if the Traveler is ever to reach a peak of efficiency so desired by students, its owners and supporters.

Financed mainly by a compulsory tax imposed upon the student body by the students themselves, the paper is edited and managed by persons elected by the student body and bound by their positions to attempt to please the student reading public. Theoretically, men elected to these posts are those best fitted for the job because of their ability in the field. Actually, student politics determine who shall edit and manage the paper! Usually the editor is a journalism major, endowed with a smattering of journalistic knowledge, and the business manager is some well known engineer, lawyer, or what have you, who knows not the difference between an agate line and a casting box. Despite these conditions, the Traveler of 1932-33 has survived, made a few friends, and many enemies.

HENRY FANCHER

Copy for the Traveler is written by neophytes in journalism, beginners who learn as they experiment, using the Traveler as a laboratory and student fees for funds. Their journalistic efforts are in the main weak, poorly written, and amateurish.

A nine-man Board of Publications—five faculty and four students—holds the upper hand. Conscientious as these gentlemen may be, half of them generally know as little about newspapers as a rank "cub reporter." Yet, they have the power to select editor and business manager candidates, judge inefficiencies, cut salaries, and even fire the staff.

To print what the student body wants (usually campus "scandal" or a bloody attack upon somebody or other) is a sure session "on the carpet" for the editor. To print a conservative paper and please the faculty means a dropping into oblivion for the staff so far as students are concerned. The system is wrong. It should be and can be changed. You can please some of the people—maybe—but never the professors and the collegians at the same time—not with the Arkansas Traveler. What to do?

The Arkansas Agriculturist is issued monthly by the students of the College of Agriculture. With the exception of a page written regularly by Dean Dan T. Gray, the paper is an exclusive product of the College of Agriculture students.

The paper serves more than the members of the Agriculture college. It is sent to many farmers in the state, and it contains many useful hints that may assist the farmer or his family.

The Arkansas Engineer is published quarterly by the students of the College of Engineering. It is distributed to all students of the College and many copies are sent out over the state to people who are interested in feats of the engineering field.

The Board of Publications is composed of four faculty members and four student members and its purpose is to act as a checking system on the various publications. It also supervises the letting of contracts for all of the student publications.

The Board was originally organized by President Futrall when there was a definite need for a check, and it has been continued to serve to a good purpose. All editors and business managers make reports at various times, allowing the Board to keep in touch with their activities.

The Chairman, Dean G. E. Ripley, votes only in case of a tie, thereby giving an equal number of votes for the students and faculty members.

The RAZORBACK and The Arkansas Traveler are under direct supervision of the Board. The Engineer and Agriculturist are under a budget committee.

Kappa Sigma was founded at the University of Virginia, December 10, 1869, by William G. McCormick, George M. Arnold, Edmund Law Rogers, Jr., Frank C. Nicodemus and John C. Boyd.

From its inception it was intended that Kappa Sigma should expand into other institutions and become a widespread organization, but it was not until 1873 that the founders saw their plans take definite shape, although a chapter had been established at the University of Alabama shortly after the parent chapter was organized.

Arkansas Xi Chapter was established in 1890. The chapter existed as the Richardson Club, named after Dr. Charles Richardson of Fayetteville, during the time the fraternities were barred from the Arkansas campus, between the years 1901 and 1903.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon was founded in 1856 by eight students of the University of Alabama, who had become hard and fast friends. In its early days it remained in the South, the first chapter north of the Mason and Dixon line being established just before the Civil War. At present the orders number one hundred and eight active chapters with an initiated membership of over 37,000. Working in collaboration with the active chapters are one hundred and five alumni associations in American cities and Paris, France. Of these, there are three in this state. Publications are fraternity histories, directories, secret publications, and the periodical magazine, "The Record," which is a quarterly with a circulation of 30,000.

National headquarters are maintained at Evanston, Illinois. In the National house, owned by S. A. E., there is a large library of books concerning fraternity subjects in general and a museum devoted to the American college fraternity. Conventions are held biennially, and in alternate years province conventions meet. The local chapter, Arkansas Upsilon, was established on the University campus in 1894 with a chapter enrollment of seventeen.

Alpha Omicron Chapter Established at U. of A., 1895

OFFICERS

FRANK CLEGG President

 BURNETT CLEMMONS Secretary
 RHAMY WAGSTAFF Treasurer

Kappa Alpha Order was founded December 21, 1865, at Washington and Lee University. The bleeding South was just emerging from the Civil War and four students of what was then Washington College banded together to start a movement to foster and maintain the manners, customs, and ideals of the Southern people. They looked to Robert E. Lee, who was at that time president of Washington College, as their ideal.

Kappa Alpha has confined itself to the South. The order now has seven chapters located in the principal colleges and universities of the South. Alpha Omicron was installed April 27, 1895. Before binding itself to the national fraternity, it was a local fraternity of ten men.

The Kappa Alpha Order is organized in seven provinces and these officiated by Province Commanders, Secretaries, and Alumni Historians. Over these provinces are a Knight Commander, a Grand Purser, a Grand Historian, and a Chief Alumnus. Professor Allan S. Humphreys, a member of the local chapter, is now serving as Grand Purser. Official publications are the Kappa Alpha Journal. The Special Messenger, Directory, and Kappa Alpha song book.

Sigma Nu originated from the Legion of Honor, a secret organization. When the Greek letter name was adopted on January 1, 189, at the Virginia Military Institute, Lexington, Va. James F. Hopkins of Arkansas was the recognized leader of the Legion of Honor, which opposed the overbearing control of another society. Hopkins, designer of the bade of Sigma Nu, was associated with Greenville Quarles and James M. Riley in the formation of the fraternity.

The chapters were not given Greek letter names at first, but were designated by Roman numerals in order of their establishment. There are now ninety-eight active chapters with a total membership of about 29,781.

Official publications include The Delta, quarterly periodical, the Sigma Nu Song Book, The Story of Sigma Nu, and Sigma Nu catalogues.

The Gamma Upsilon chapter was established at the University of Arkansas in 1904.

OFFICERS

HARRY HURLEY President
NEAL LUSTER Vice-President
JULIUS McADAMS Secretary

Sigma Chi was founded at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, on June 28, 1855, by Thomas C. Bell, James P. Caldwell, F. H. Lockwood, who, with the exception of the last, had been members of Kappa Chapter of Delta Kappa Epsilon. It was the nineteenth college fraternity founded and the third to be founded at Miami University, the other two being Beta Theta Pi and Phi Delta Theta, which, with Sigma Chi, form the Miami Triad. The fraternity was first announced as Sigma Phi, but in 1856 the name was changed to Sigma Chi, due to the fact that the ritual and records of the chapter were stolen and that here existed at that time an eastern fraternity known as Sigma Phi.

The fraternity was carried on during the Civil War by a very unique group, the Constantine Chapter, which was composed of seven Sigma Chis who were in the Confederate Army. Its purpose was to perpetuate the fraternity in the South, regardless of the outcome of the war. Two initiations were held and the chapter remained active until the close of the war. Sigma Chi was the first Greek-letter fraternity to adopt a private publication, which was established in 1877.

Sigma Chi consists of 91 chapters that are active, and twenty that are inactive. Two of the chapters are in Canada. The official publication is the Magazine of Sigma Chi.

Sigma Phi Epsilon was founded at Richmond College (now the University of Richmond), Richmond, Virginia, in November, 1901. The basis of the organization was a society called the Saturday Night Club.

One of the features of the fraternity is the financial plan. Concerning this, Baird's Manual says: "In 1916 the Purdue chapter surrendered all its property to the alumni who devised a plan of operation, since copyrighted by the fraternity as the Purdue Plan and now known as the "Sigma Phi Epsilon Plan of Finance." Under this plan financial affairs of the chapter are entirely in the hands of the alumni, the inexperienced undergraduate being relieved of this burden and so left free to devote all time to fraternal matters. The plan which worked so successfully at Purdue has been installed in all the chapters."

Arkansas Alpha chapter was installed at the University of Arkansas in 1907. The publication of the order is the Sigma Phi Epsilon Journal, published monthly.

Theta Kappa Nu was never founded; it was amalgamated. If founding dates back to the first chapter of a fraternity, Theta Kappa Nu was born in 1867 at Culver-Stockton College in Missouri. But in this consolidation decade Theta Kappa Nu represents the merger plan applied to the fraternal world. At a meeting in Springfield, Missouri, in 1924, eight old established locals and a small national fraternity of three chapters assumed the same obligations. Theta Kappa Nu then is unique in having no mother chapters.

There are fifty-five chapters of Theta Kappa Nu. Arkansas Alpha, in accordance with national rules, owns its home. Activities and scholarship have been the stressed features of the local group.

Plans for the future of Arkansas Alpha of Theta Kappa Nu are for intensive improvements in the form restricted pledging of new men; extensive improvement in favorable publicity as pertains to scholarship, morality and good will.

Founded at Oglethorpe University, 1916.

Mu Chapter Established at the University of Arkansas, 1928.

OFFICERS

OLEN MARSHALL President
 JOE BYLANDER Vice-President
 WILLIAM GRANT . Secretary-Treasurer

Alpha Lambda Tau was founded at Oglethorpe University October 8, 1916, the first fraternal organization on the campus. The prime motive of the founders was the desire to have a new fraternity grow with a new university. For ten years there was an unconfirmed opinion among the members that the fraternity was to be forever confined to the South. Several years ago, however, this subject was discussed in convention and repudiated. Since then the lone northern chapter has been established at the University of Illinois. The fraternity was founded to be a national organization, and although expansion has been extremely slow, a national survey has been carried out through the Central Office during the last four years.

The government of the organization is centralized through a Central Office located at Atlanta, Georgia, and a yearly convention in which all chapters participate legislates on important changes and measures affecting the organization.

The fraternity issues a quarterly known as the Rose Leaf and a monthly esoteric publication, The Alt. The first named, during the early years of the fraternity, was issued irregularly, but in recent years has been published regularly.

The founders, Eleanor Dorcas Pond and Ida Shaw Martin, on that day associated with them twenty undergraduates and organized as a national sorority. The spirit of Delta Delta Delta has so been shared that there are now seventy-six college chapters and eighty alumnae chapters in the United States and Canada. Delta Delta Delta now numbers in its membership more than 15,000 women.

The local chapter of Delta Delta Delta, Delta Iota, was granted a charter November 15, 1913. The anniversary of the chapter is celebrated annually by the return of Tri Deltas from all parts of the state to the chapter house for the Delta banquet given on that day.

Delta Delta Delta sponsors three endowment funds, the National Endowment Fund, the Trident Endowment Fund, and the Visiting Endowment Fund. The sorority is now building up a Thanksgiving Endowment Fund which is to be used for altruistic purposes among college women to further higher education. The three publications of Delta Delta Delta are the Trireme, the Triglyph, and the Trident.

The Women's Panhellenic Association of the University of Arkansas is composed of two representatives from each sorority on the campus. At present there are seven organizations belonging to the Association.

The purpose of the Association is to regulate rushing and other interfraternity matters, to promote cooperation and good feeling between the chapters, and to work together for the good of the University and its women students.

Once each year the Association holds an open meeting for all sorority girls. On these occasions some national officer of a society makes an address.

Until 1927 sorority rushing was a grave problem on the University of Arkansas campus, and the Women's Panhellenic undertook to remedy the defective system then in effect. Under the present system of rushing there is little or no friction between the sororities.

Miss Martha Reid, Dean of Women at the University, is the faculty advisor for the Association, and to her should be given much credit for the success of its administration. Meetings of the Panhellenic are held once a month in the office of the Dean of Women, with Miss Reid present.

Blue Key, honor fraternity, was founded at the University of Florida in October, 1924, by Major Bert C. Riley. A national organization was established in February, 1925. Blue Key recognizes outstanding qualities in character, scholarship, student activities, leadership, and service. Membership is composed of graduate and undergraduate students of all departments of American colleges and universities. Honorary membership is extended to a limited number of faculty members and alumni. The fraternity is committed to cooperate with the faculty; to study student problems; stimulate progress and promote the interests of the institutions where it has chapters.

The badge is an oblong key of gold on the surface of which appears a spreadeagle; in the mouth of the eagle is a wreath; at the feet, on the lower left point of the cross, is a star. Outside of the oval in which these symbols appear, the corners of the key are brilliant azure blue.

Tau Beta Pi is an honorary society founded at Lehigh University, June, 1885, under the leadership of Professor E. H. Williams, Jr. Its purpose is to confer distinction upon those students who have maintained a high grade of scholarship and to foster a spirit of liberal culture in the engineering students in the institutions in which its chapters are located.

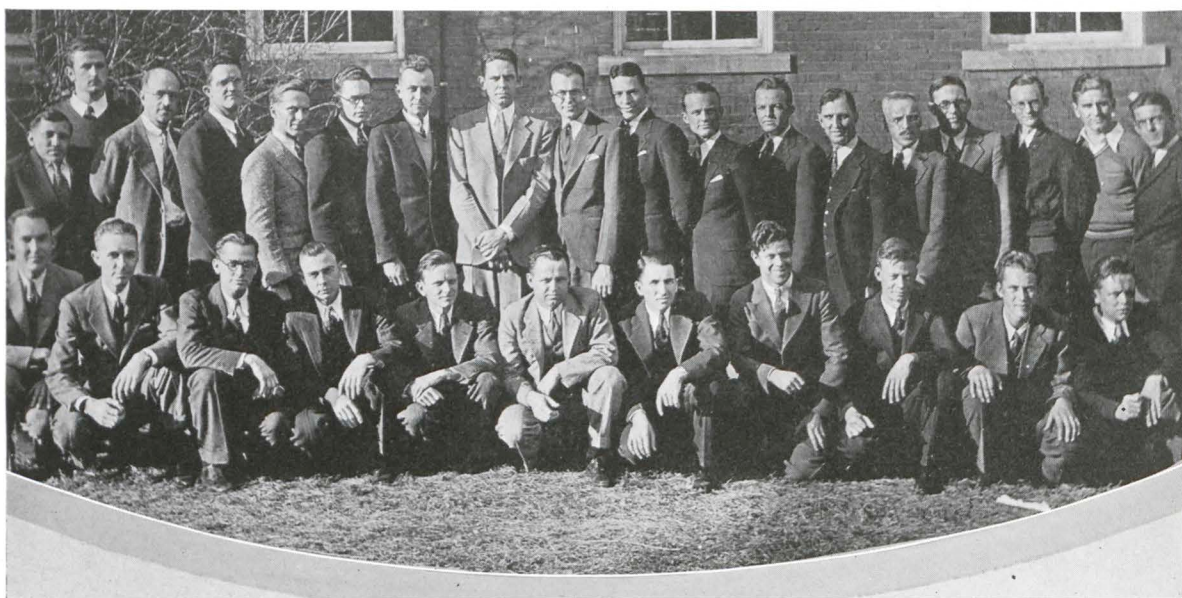

When a chapter is established it may confer its key upon its alumni and students of earlier years in analogy to a similar custom in Phi Beta Kappa. Membership may be offered to graduates of engineering colleges where there is no chapter, provided the recipient has fulfilled the regular eligibility requirements as a student. Membership of distinction may be conferred upon prominent engineers who may or may not already be members of the society.

Alpha Chapter has been active since its establishment at the University of Arkansas in 1914. Election is considered one of the highest honors that can be bestowed upon an engineer.

From the date of its foundation to 1922, the fraternity was made up of collegiate chapters and alumni chapters, but during the above mentioned year there was a reorganization of the fraternity into two general branches, one of them consisting of the collegiate chapters and the other of the professional chapters. Octagon, local honorary organization for outstanding senior women, was founded at the University of Arkansas in May, 1929, but did not make an official appearance on the campus until the following school year, when the members met, elected officers, and drew up a constitution.

The organization was begun under the leadership of Miss Martha Reid, Dean of Women, who has held up before the eyes of the group a prospect of Mortar Board, a national organization for outstanding women.

The name, Octagon, was chosen by the local group from the fact that there were eight members originally selected, and the group has determined to adhere to the practice of pledging only one from each of the seven sororities and Carnall Hall. The purpose of the organization is to develop and encourage in young women the qualities of service, leadership, and scholarship.

Blackfriars, national honorary dramatic fraternity, was organized at the University of Arkansas in 1913, by Roger Williams, at that time a member of the Public Speaking Department of the University, and later director of the forty-seven Workshop at Harvard University. The fraternity started with only a few workers and for a number of years maintained a policy of a small, exclusive membership. Later it broadened its policy to include members of the dramatic department and the chapter at the University of Arkansas is now supplementing the work of the University Little Theatre.

In its initial performance of the year, the Blackfriars Dramatic fraternity presented "Ghosts," by Hendrick Ibsen. The play was directed by Fanchon Simms Oliver and it was well received. Virginia Pryor and Sydney McMath, in the roles of the leading characters, gave a splendid interpretation of their parts. Williard Smith, Murray Davis, and Marion Buxton did their roles with no small amount of distinction. Smith, as the drunk, was fine.

The second play, titled "S. S. Tenacity," told the story of the happenings on a ship. J. A. Rowles, playing the part of the drunkard, did well. T. Roy Reid and Jean Foutz, with David Boatright, took the other leads. Little Marjorie Hunt played the wine shop keeper and oh! boy, did she do a good job of it. Curtiss Youngblood and W. J. Avery were in the play too.

The next play was Vollmers' "Sun Up," and was directed by Russell Burnette. It portrayed the moonshiners life up in them thar old hills of North Carolina. The gol' darn moonshiners git the wust of it when the revenueurs comes in. Phylis Houston and Sidney McMath supply the love interest and Eli Leflar and Virginia Pryor take the elderly parts. Murray Davis, Curtis Youngblood, and Willard Smith did well in the supporting roles.

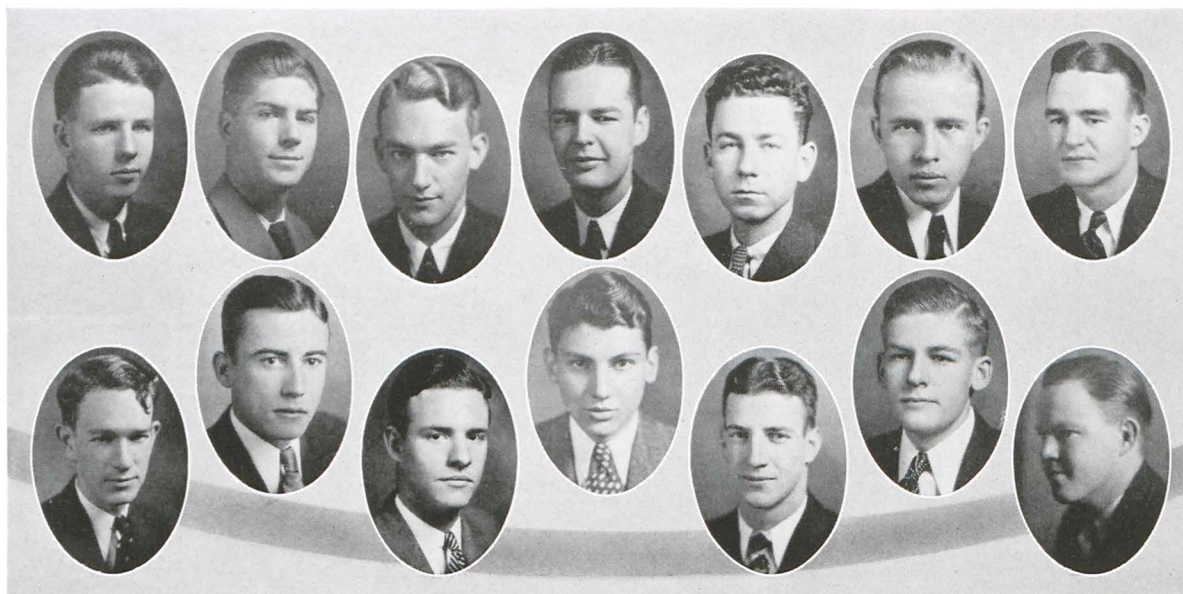

The group contemplates giving the "Twelfth Night" and "East Lynne" at the early date. Russell Burnette is to do the directing and Eli Leflar will make all of the sets for the stage.

Alpha Kappa Psi was founded at New York Universtiy in 1904. Beta Zeta chapter was established in the University of Arkansas November, 1928. The fraternity has fifty-six active chapters in the leading schools of Business Administration in the United States and Canada.

Each year an efficiency contest is promoted among all the chapters and it is with much pride that Beta Zeta announces its success in placing itself in first place for the past year's activities.

Meetings are held semi-monthly at which time prominent speakers talk on topics related to business. The chapter also is prominently identified by the high scholarship of its members and by its annual awards promotes the best endeavors of students in the Business School.

Phi Alpha Delta was founded in Chicago, Illinois, November 8, 1902. It was the outgrowth and reorganization of a fraternity of law students known as Lambda Epsilon, founded in 1897. Membership is limited to students of law at various accredited law schools where chapters are located. Students belonging to general college fraternities are admitted. Members of the legal profession who have attained distinction, upon the approval of the national executive board, are eligible to honorary membership by special election and initiation throughout local chapters.

Names of the chapters are in honor of some celebrated lawyer or jurist. Garland chapter was founded at the University of Arkansas in 1919. It was named for Augustus H. Garland, the only man from Arkansas to be in a President's cabinet. He served as Attorney-General in President Cleveland's administration.

The object of Sigma Alpha Iota is to form bodies of representative women who shall, by their influence and their musical interest, uphold the highest ideals of a musical education; to raise the standards of productive musical work among the women students of colleges and universities; to further the development of a stronger bond of musical interest and understanding between foreign countries and America, and to develop loyalty to the Alma Mater.

Sigma Omicron Chapter, a strong link in S. I. A.'s chain of service and high ideals, was installed November 25, 1925. The chapter has four patronesses: Mrs. Harry Shultz, Mrs. Fred L. Kerr, Mildred Killespie, and Mrs. Bert Lewis.

Pi Mu Epsilon has grown out of the Math Club, an organization founded at the University of Arkansas on February 11, 1919, by a group of students interested in mathematics. The group was under the direction of Dr. W. L. Miser. The fraternity exists as a laboratory media for the study of higher mathematics.

Among the charter members of the club are A. M. Harding and Davis P. Richardson. E. E. Stevenson, president of the club in 1922, was the reciprocant of a Rhodes scholarship.

Pi Mu Epsilon requires a candidate for membership to have an average of 4.00 in mathematics. The organization is recognized on the Arkansas campus as a lively one—serving a purpose beyond merely offering itself as another organization for someone to belong to.

The Menorah is a society open for all students. Its purpose is the study of Jewish thought and literary creations, which will enable the student to become able to adjust himself more easily to the complex situations he will have to face in later life. The Menorah believes in free and open-minded study and discussion, because only through these mediums can students arrive at intelligent and unbiased opinions.

The society, under the able leadership of its president Reuben Yonteff, had a most prosperous year. Its membership has increased many fold over that of preceeding years and correspondence has been carried on with many of the leading chapters of the country. There is no doubt that the society is a firmly established fixture on the University campus.

Deutscher Verein completes its fourth year since its reorganization in 1929, following a period of inactivity after 1917. It has regained the prestige and usefulness it enjoyed before the war, and its monthly programs, featuring lectures and short talks in German, German songs, burlesques and plays, are attended by faculty and townspeople as well as members. Membership includes students who have made a grade of B or better in the first semester German. An annual banquet is given in the spring.

Agri Day Association was organized in 1817 and since that time there has been an annual celebration sponsored by Agricultural students. For the first few years, Agri Day was in the form of a carnival or fair, featuring exhibits of the various departments, a parade, and the Agri Ball. The celebration was held in the fall of each year until after the World War when the enrollment in the Colleges of Agriculture increased and new features were added to the Day.

Besides sponsoring the events of Agri Day, which now comes in late April of each year, the association sponsors a fall "Barn-Warmin'" given soon after the school year begins, and an annual spring picnic and "Barn Dance" at the University farm. Each of these activities involve considerable capital outlay and cooperative effort on the part of all Agricultural students.

The accomplishments of the Women's League have been manifold for the past year. The initial reward that the league has given was donated this year. Ruth Flemming, who proved to be the freshman scholar of 1932, was awarded twenty-five dollars for her outstanding abilities as a scholar. The League plans to make this a permanent award and it will be given next year for the highest grade point made this year by a freshman woman.

In the way of Social entertainment, the League has had two very successful parties. Mrs. Caraway, Arkansas' greatest woman senator, was tendered a banquet by the girls and afterwards she spoke about the great place that women occupy in this world. In the second place, the League's Vocational Conference was a tremendous success and its paramount purpose was to assist young ladies in training for future occupations. The League is continuing the good work of organizing the varied activities of the women students and is proving itself to be a very important factor to the school and the students.

The Branner Geology Club, named in honor of Dr. J. C. Branner, former State geologist, was organized on February 5, 1925, by five geology majors for the purpose of promoting interest in geology among the student body.

Meetings are held each month at which subjects of geological interest are discussed and original papers presented. The chief requirement for membership is an active interest in geology, the importance of which few students realize.

The club takes a field trip once each year, with a view of increasing interest in the Club itself, and for the benefit of the members.

Rootin' Rubes was organized in 1925 for the purpose of fostering all University activities and to encourage college spirit and loyalty among the students. It was organized as a little sister club to the A. B. C.'s. Its membership is composed of representatives of all University women, three of its members being chosen from each sorority, and five from Carnall Hall.

The Routin' Rubes, together with the Arkansas Booster Club, have founded a pep squad compose of five members from each campus group. It is hoped that this auxiliary will amleiorate cheer.ing conditions at the University.

The club also functions socially. At various times during the year, the members serve tea at the Y. W. C. A. room in the University. All three-letter athletes are presented blankets by the organization.

The American Institute of Electrical Engineers, a national organization, has as members professional engineers and a large number of students. Any student who is actively interested in electrical engineering is eligible for membership.

The purpose of the national organization is to promote the interests of the profession. It plays an important part in establishing and maintaining professional standards as well as the industrial standards with which it is concerned. Through its student branches it helps the student engineer while in school and helps him become established as a professional engineer after graduation.

The student branch at the University of Arkansas gives the student engineer an opportunity to associate with others who are interested in this branch of engineering.

The Poetry Club is an organization composed of men and women students who are interested in studying and writing poetry. Membership is based on the ability to write meritorious verse or to give critical analysis of poetry.

Activities of the club include campus-wide verse contest, meetings every two weeks, and an annual banquet at the close of the school year.

The aim of the club is to create and sustain a greater interest in the appreciation and composition of better verse among the students.

The Poetry Club was organized in 1926, largely through the efforts of Mr. L. F. Hawkins, Instructor of English, at the university, and Mrs. Rosa Zagnoni Marinoni, poetess and resident of Fayetteville. In 1931, a new constitution better suited to the widening scope of the club's activities was adopted, largely through the efforts of Dr. Margaret Richter, Instructor of English.

The student branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineering is one of the branches of the professional organization now eighteen years of age.

The purpose of the group is to create a more friendly association with other mechanicals, to create an interest in all subjects and to help the graduates in getting established and advanced in the engineering world.

Meetings are held monthly when various programs are presented by members and visitors. In the line of seminar work A. S. M. E. has furnished opportunity for members to obtain credit in their school work. This credit is allowed for presenting a paper on some assigned subject and attending three fourths of all meetings.

This year A. S. M. E. has taken an active part in all engineering activities, and especially Engineering Day.

General Engineering Society is the student organization that attends to all the functions of the College of Engineering. Every Engineer, from the freshman class through the senior class, is a member and entitled to all the rights and privileges of the college as a whole. The organization elects its officers in the fall and St. Pat and the Engineers Queen in the spring.

This year the Engineers Day was a big success, the best in several years. It started in characteristic style, the bursting of dynamite charges, at one minute after midnight to begin the day of March seventeenth. Robert Boyd reigned for the day as St. Pat along with Rosamond Norton as the Engineers Queen. A special convocation was called at 11 o'clock, the principal speaker being Sterling A. Lipscomb of Little Rock. All the senior Engineers were knighted. The day ended in the true fashion, the Engineers Ball, with St. Pat and the Queen leading the Grand March.

First row: Boyd, Thornberry, Cope, Atkins.
Second row: Hirshorn, Norton.

The University 4-H Club was founded December, 1929, and has made continuous progress with each passing semester. The membership is composed of men and women students who completed one or more years of 4-H Club work before coming to the University. The purpose of the club is to develop qualities of leadership; to increase knowledge concerning the state and national club work; to encourage members of state 4-H clubs to enter the College of Agriculture; and to prepare the members to become more efficient workers in the field of Agricultural Extension.

The Arkansas Booster's Club is the official pep organization for men on the University of Arkansas campus. In addition to taking the leading part in all yells at the athletic contests, the club supervises the Freshmen, seeing that they obey traditions when attending football games. Members of the club escort the Homecoming Queen when she parades at the annual celebration.

The group sent representatives to Little Rock for the Baylor game and formed the traditional "A" during the halves.

It is open to people who have displayed some dramatic ability and who show a desire to display some of their talent. The group have given several plays in the auditorium this year and each of them has met with success. Under the leadership of President Herbert Arthurs it has made rapid strides this year.

Tau Kappa Alpha is a national organization for college students who have participated in one or more college forensic contests.

The Debate Club is a direct outcome of non-support from the student affairs committee. Interest in debating dropped and in order to revive this activity, the Debate Club was formed. Members are given regular tryouts to see if they are able to meet the qualifications and are voted into membership. Much credit should be given Prof. V. L. THE COMMANDMANT

MAJOR WHITE

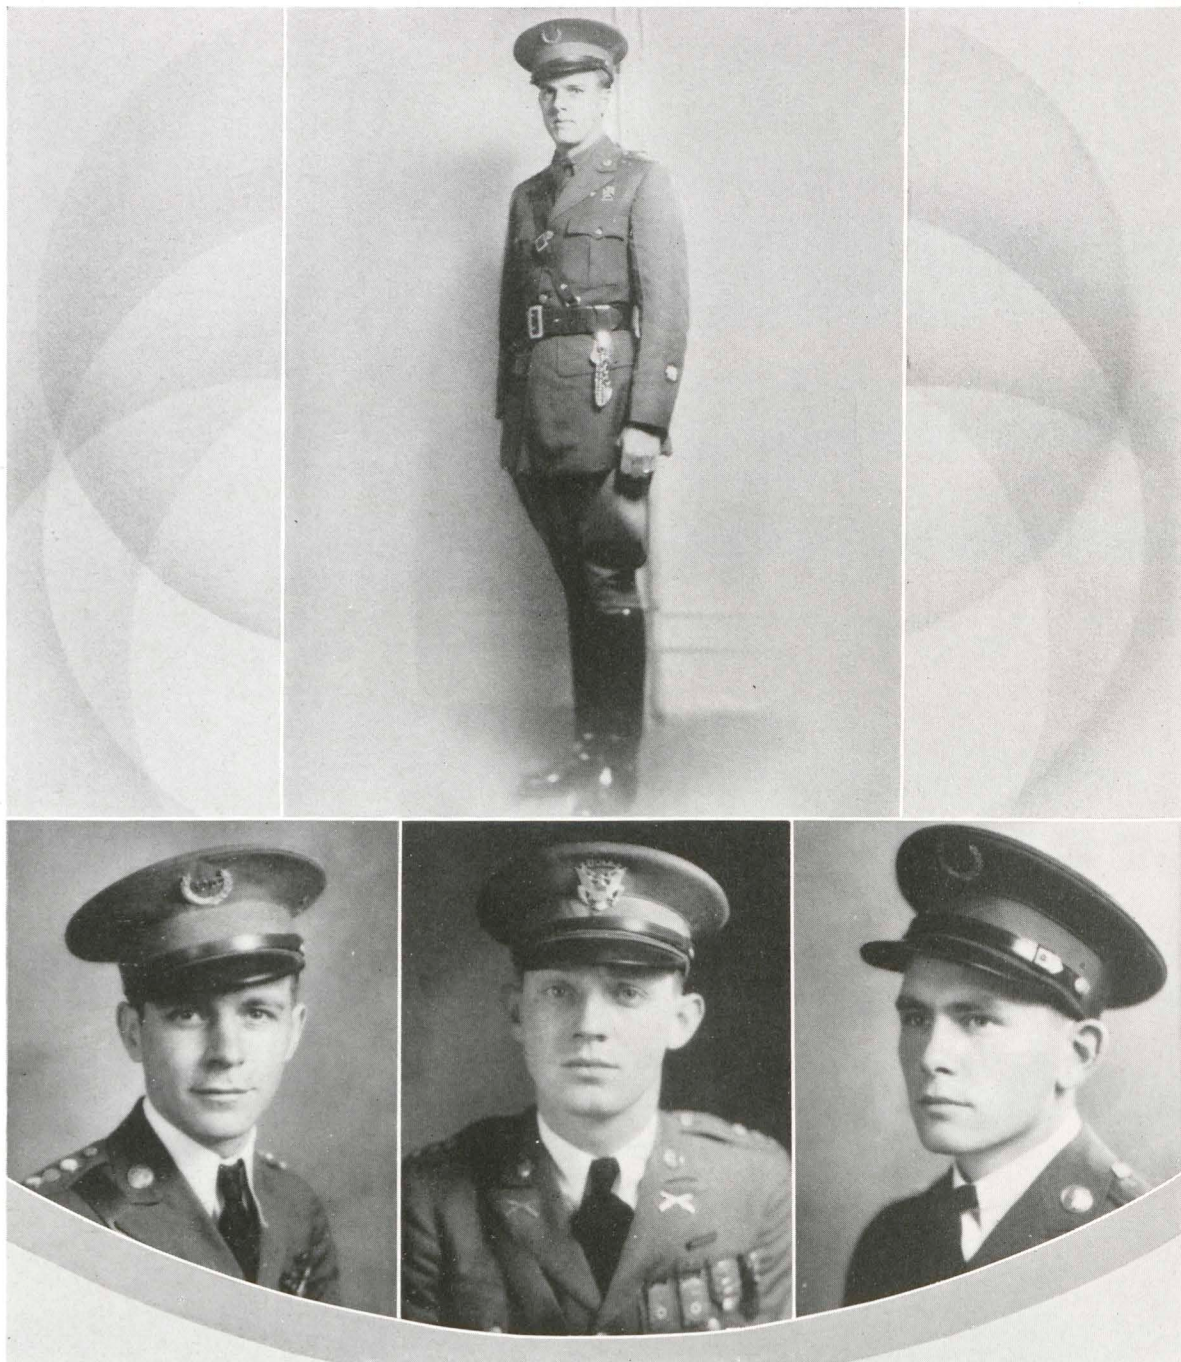

The University of Arkansas Reserve Officer's Training Corps, under the direction of Major White, has had a very successful year. Each year the Regiment seems to better itself over the previous year, although for the past two years the Regiment has received the Division Colonel's highest rank. Major White, in rounding out such a splendid organization, is very ably assisted by Captains, Thompson, Akins, and Myers.

The Office of Regimental Commander, filled by the Cadet Colonel is one of the most coveted of offices on the University campus. Ordinarily the most outstanding and most promising of the Senior officers is chosen by the Commandant for this post. Three hard years of military work are well worth the honor that the fortunate one attains his senior year. Colonel Gibson reviews the troops at all military parades and escorts Queen Kenney during the Grand March at the Military Ball.

To be named sponsor of the R. O. T. C. Regiment by an all cadet vote is an honor that one should be justly proud of. Regimental Sponsor Kenney fills with perfect poise the boots of the Regimental sponsor. Not only does she assist the colonel in reviewing the Regiment, but she has the honor of the day at the Military Ball, the leading of the Grand March. The other sponsors follow Queen Kenney at the Ball and are present at all parades.

FOREWORD

Humor, we are told, is a lost art among college annual editors. And we have heard this from more sources than the omnipresent Censor Board. And an examination of the humor sections of several college annuals has almost proved the truth of our advice. Almost, we say. There are, of course, annuals which have humorous humor sections; but to achieve this distinction requires an ability which the editors of the 1933 Razorback have not been able to locate amongst the students of the University of Arkansas. Such talent exists upon the campus probably, but a rigorous search for it has failed in its purpose.

Thus it is, that in lieu of incorporating into this yearbook the customary vulgarity which has in the past masqueraded under the name of wit, we present, as an experiment (and one for whose success or failure we do not apologize), some prize winning literary productions of the year at the University, which might not otherwise have come to the attention of the greater number of students.

The authors of these few pieces have kindly permitted us to publish in this place their compositions; by their requests no names have been signed to the works.

We are deeply grateful to several student members of the Department of English for kind assistance in editing and abridging some of the material herein published.

THE EDITORS.

DOOM

Ramon Raskovitch was a surgeon in the house of the Csar. He had practiced his profession faithfully for the royal family; and he was an aristocrat. Years of association with courtiers and with princes had installed in his mind the ineradicable idea that Kingship was of a divine right. What God has given, no man can tear asunder, he would often chuckle as he thought of revolutionary tendencies in other less stable countries.

And so, when the fearful word came that the peasants had revolted and were marching on Moscow he waved his hands in graceful aria and laughed. It was thus that he missed his opportunity of escaping to those more hospitable countries with his comrades, who had seized what few jewels were at hand and crossed the border in a mad frenzy, believing truly that their world had come to an end. He remained in the corridors of the royal palace, smoking his cigarette and laughing to think of the honor he would gain by remaining behind. He laughed now at the faces of his comrades when they should return safe and unharmed to the side of their powerful Emperor.

But the revolutionary forces broke into the palace, tore down the icons, burned the valuable tapestries, cut the throats of a few, and left, carrying with them the now depleted Dr. Raskovitch, who no longer chuckled. On all sides of him he heard men begging to be given death; desiring death rather than the stigma of prison under a hated peasant regime. The doctor, however, would not beg for death; he still believed too strongly in the power of his King. He was placed, for some reason known only to the peasant mind, in a cold cell far below the snow-covered face of his country, and he was fortunate in not hearing the echo of the shots which released the royal family.

It was uncomfortable in his small room, and dark. There were spiders, and now and then a bat; there were dark, furry animals that nipped at his clothes, and sometimes drew blood from his shivering flesh; the musty straw pallet reeked with peasant filth, and with peasant vermin. The doctor however kept his spirits. The peasant mind would not long rule; it could never cope with the eccentricities of a Czarist government. He comforted himself with such thoughts, and prayed, and hoped, and waited. As the winter grew longer the cold grew more intense.

The peasant mind, he had always contended, was sly and cruel, and one must fight cruelty with cruelty. It was the creed he had preached among his social companions and it was the creed for which he had been lauded and praised. The cruelty of the peasant mind made itself known. Some guard, who, he knew, had once milked a dozen cows and had slept with the pigs, had a hatred of all royalists. It was therefore a pleasant game to build a fire far enough from his prisoner's cell so that no heat would reach it, and near enough so that the glow would torture the man intensely.

The doctor held out his hands through the bars of the cage with the hope that he might catch the rays of heat and carry them inward to his cold body; but the guard with practiced cruelty spat into his outstretched palms, while his prisoner cursed. And then a plan leaped into the medical mind. He sat for long hours and for long days brooding over plans for the murder of this man when the Czar should return. He grew more impatient as the days and the months passed. Finally, unable to restrain himself he called to the man outside his cell and said: "Friend, when will the Czar return?"

Laughter smote him; laughter which ricocheted upward and wound about his heart and he heard the words in reply: "The Czar? Ha! My comrade, my son of a beetle, do you not know that the Czar is dead?" And the rollicking body of the fellow shook and rolled with evil mirth. The heart went out of the prisoner. He had planned and planned and now his world was torn from about him. The Czar was dead; he would never have his revenge. And he stretched cold hands once more toward the gleaming fire hoping for warmth and comfort. His eyes took on a far-a-way look, and were glazed. He saw nothing, heard nothing; felt nothing.

One day however, his chance came. An unlucky guard, celebrating the anniversary of Communism, had disobeyed orders by consuming several portions too much of vodka. And in his drunkenness he taunted the prisoner against whom he held a deep and abiding hatred. "Son of dog," he roared. "An Aristocrat; father of many bastards!" He laughed until he lost control of all bodily movement; he fell against the bars of the cage and strong arms grappled him, choked the life slowly out of him. The doctor's hand groped about for the ring of keys, found it unlocked the door of his cell, and, administering a last brutal kick at the unconscious side of his former jailer, made his way to freedom and to light. The cold smote him, and the strange grimness of the people about the streets frightened him, until he hid himself away.

Comrade Nicolai wandered about the streets of Moscow, bewildered and smiling with a strange loathsome smile which showed his yellow jagged teeth beneath bared lips. Men who met him turned aside in sudden and unaccountable horror; and women shuddered unconsciously as he gazed at them. "Son of a dog," he thought, "how they dress up. Yellow tickets they would have in the days of the Czar." And he laughed until he frowned, finally to slink away again mouthing strange oaths and meaningless phrases.

Alone and homeless he wandered, hiding and again mingling with the people. Strange thoughts wandered through his mind. He had no friends; no food; no companionship; no clothes. He held tightly always to a stolen overcoat which had once been a part of the royal ensemble. Often he gloated over the faded letters of its trade mark: Tailors to His majesty the Czar. It was a symbol of what had been; and he clung to it.

But the winters in Moscow grew colder; and he became more afraid and more hungry. He tore out the lining of the coat and sold it to a friend of his for a rouble. He bought food and feasted; but the nights were colder and colder and he huddled deeper into his rag of a bed, nursing the label of what had once been the Czar's coat. And he dreamed of the cold which descended upon him in frenzy; his stomach roared and cried for food; and he moaned in his sleep and curled tighter into the bedding.

There was a fire one night in an older district of the great city, and Nicolai awoke with the blaze of it in his face. Unconsciously he arose and buttoned his stinking garments tighter about his body and crawled out into the streets in the direction of the glow. His forehead wore a puzzled frown; some old memory was creeping upon him. And still he wandered on, and the glow became brighter. Finally he came within a block of the district and fell upon a doorstep; fell, and watched the seething mass of flame crawl higher about the old structure; the wind blew spirals of flame in his direction and he stretched forth his hands towards it. An old light came into his eyes and he remembered. He looked about for his guard; saw none and smiled. His lips curled higher about yellow teeth and he leaned forward, straining through the bars of his cage, toward the small gleam of fire. He became rigid, and his smile grew tighter about the yellow teeth. A soldier came closer to him, stared, and cursed to himself. "Get up, Comrade, get up! You can't sit here all night. It is against the rules. Come now, get up."

Nicolai's head turned only slightly, and his smile became even more ominously brilliant. The guard spat at the side-walk before trying further efforts with this drunken fool of a peasant. A new light sprang into Nicolai's eyes as he saw the action, and he murmured incomprehensible words. He remembered. And as the guard was bending over him to lift him to his feet he snarled, and cried in a frozen voice: "the fire my friend, the fire." The guard drew back; then in anger he shook the stiff body. There was no life in it.

THE CENTAUR RETURNING

Wildly out of the west he had come
Like a hurricane sated with rain,
But the beat of his hooves was a drum
To the hope of his soul and his brain.

Every strand of his mane was thick-burred,
But his eyes through the mass were aglow
By the fire in his brain newly stirred
With desires for the sound of a blow.

But the flesh of his flanks had been galled
And his muscular legs had been torn,
So he limped and he panted and crawled
Till he came to the land of the Morn.

But they captured him there, to his rage,
And they shut him up close in a stall
Where he languished and fretted with age,
And his gallop had turned to a crawl.

But he neighed and grew fatted and sleek
In the care of a curious mankind
And he bowed with a smile, became meek,
Till he found they were not of his kind.

Then the elements rotted the bars
Of his stall. So he whinnied and called
To the night; but his soul held the scars
Of his flanks, which were ruthlessly galled.

But he strained with his limbs. And the sound
Was the cry of a woman in birth;
And he heaved himself upward, was drowned
In his tears, as Gethsemane's earth.

So the heart of him, weighted and dreary,
Grew slow, made a labored demise;
For the soul of him, sobbing and weary,
Was burst and went out with his eyes.

MATURITY

I took a bud where still a show of green
Held firm the curling flakes of pale and flush.
It was the freshest bud that I had seen
And, burningly, I brought, with force to crush,
It to my lips, but when I looked—afraid
That it was hurt, there was no impress made.

I set it in a vase and turned aside;
And then I came again. With full flung grace
It showed a passion pallor could not hide
And blew its breath of sweetness in my face.
Yet this time when I held it to my lips
It broke and fell back through my finger tips.

WHEREFORE REJOICE

DRAMATIS PERSONAE:

KATRINA: A pretty German girl of about nineteen years. She wears her straw-colored hair in a crown-like braid around her head. Her dress is of some dark blue material, the sleeves are puffed slightly at the shoulders. She wears a rather soiled apron about her waist.

ERIC: A retired sea-captain, who affects dirty dungarees. He wears the soiled white cap of a captain over his gray hair, which is slightly too long.

BILL: An immaculately dressed old ne'er do-well. At the time of the action of this play he is wearing a well-pressed grey suit, and carries a slender cane. He has taken an interest in the old captain, Eric, from the time years ago when he took a trip on the old man's ship, and has since affected friendship with Eric's companions.

MARIA: Katrina's aunt. She is a fat old woman with grey hair, a pleasant wrinkled face, and she is wearing a dirty white dress, which is a trifle too short, and a trifle too tight about her bulging waist. For years she has been in love with Eric, and he with her, but it has been one of those drifting loves, which has never consummated in marriage.

GRETCHEN: A young, fair-haired girl dressed in the clean white smock worn by waitresses. Her hair has fallen about her tear-stained face, and the dress has become rumpled, expressive of her inward emotions.

THE SAILOR: Wearing the conventional uniform of the mercantile service.

THE SCENE is laid in a small, dilapidated bar-room, located next to a great warehouse on the wharves of the city of San Francisco. Extending along the left rear of the interior of the room is a long bar, marked by much rough usage. There are scars along its lower part and the upper portion has been worn clean by the numberless elbows of past clients. To the extreme left of this bar is a narrow door leading into the living quarters of the house. In the upper left and extending to the upper center of the room are three small tables each with four chairs. Other chairs are ranged against the rear center wall. In the extreme lower left are two small tables identical with the other tables. In the center of the set is a wide double door which leads into the street. This door is now closed. The scene opens on a bar set, except for Marie and Eric who are seated close together facing the audience at one of the two tables at lower left. They are talking in low tones. Eric caresses Marie's large hand with a comforting gesture, and shakes his head throughout whatever silence comes upon them.

MARIE: When did you hear this?

ERIC: Early this morning. She went down in the storm with all on board.

MARIE: My poor Katrina! It will break her heart. She is so young.

ERIC: She must not know!

MARIE: Yes, we cannot tell her! (Katrina is heard singing off-stage. Marie nudges Eric forcefully and they become silent as Katrina enters at left).

KATRINA: (Singing) When my lover comes back to me; When my lover comes over the sea . . . (She breaks off her song as she catches sight of them, and pauses perceptibly in her swinging walk. Then she hurries behind the bar, turns her back to them and to the audience and begins polishing briskly at a large mug. Finally, her embarrassment overcome, she says over her shoulder): He is coming back.

MARIA: Yes? . . . You should forget this man of yours.

KATRINA: Why, Aunt! (She turns to them with a half-shocked, half-playful expression on her face).

ERIC: Maria is right. These young sailor boys are not like the old ones. (But there is a half sob in his throat. He tries to drive it away with a chuckle).

KATRINA: (She goes over and chucks the old man playfully under the chin, as she smiles). Say, what is the matter with you two?

MARIA: (Choking) These lovers, pah!

ERIC: (Looking at Maria) Ah, these young fools. What do they know of love? (There is a tenderness visible in his eyes and audible in his voice as he looks at the fat old woman. Maria slaps him gently on the cheek as Katrina turns back to her work).

KATRINA: He's been long on this trip . . . Three months! But now we will be married. A nice home, some kids, and my sailor man. (She grows playfully reminiscent). Maybe we even have a ship . . . a big one. (She turns again to them but becomes em-barassed under their watchful eyes, and goes happily back to her work of polishing the glasses).

ERIC: (To Maria) Ah, my fat one, that is how I love you. Only I am no more a child. (He sighs audibly) I have lost this crazy youthful foolishness

MARIA: (Stroking his face gently) You hurt me with your talk. You are bad so to speak to me.

ERIC: No, I do not laugh at you. You are fat, but I love you.

MARIA: (Gazing towards Katrina, whose back is to them, and lowering her voice. The strain of keeping up the farce is showing visibly in her features which have become suddenly more wrinkled. Her voice shakes). Sh how could you talk so? How could we forget? Oh, God, how will it end? and she so young! (Her voice has at last risen audibly showing even more plainly the strain she labors under).

ERIC: (Loudly as though to cover up his anxiety). But it is so. (He shakes his head sadly).

KATRINA: (With her back to them) Yes, I go away and leave you old fools. But you will come to see us and take care of the little ones, no? (She turns meditatively and catches their almost horror-stricken glance). Oh, but you are old fools! Why are you not happy like me? See, I am so happy, so happy, my lover is coming home! (She looks down at her and murmurs:) Two old fools. (She shakes her head tenderly now and turning, reaches out to push Eric's cap from his head. He pushes her aside gently and places the cap again on his head at the proper jaunty angle. Maria watches them and shakes her head reprovingly).

ERIC: (To Katrina) Go away. You do not understand. We old ones love that our caps and shoes should remain safe. We do not like that one should change us. (He looks up at her and smiles jokingly) But you have your love you cannot understand.

MARIA: Yes, we are old. We do not need love it is better so. (She shakes a warning, but trembling finger at Katrina).

KATRINA: (Saucily) There is nothing better than love. You cannot tell me of love. (She goes out the door at left. Just as she leaves Bill comes in the door at Center, and listens sadly to the sound of her singing voice. He catches sight of the two at the table and comes over to them, slowly. Maria raises a finger to her lips and motions him to sit down by her).

BILL: You have heard then?

MARIA: Yes, we have heard but she does not know!

BILL: She will find out.

MARIA: Yes, but she is so young: she is so happy. How can we who are old tell her? Old and afraid (She sighs).

ERIC: It is bad for the old to tell the young . . they do not understand. It is better that they find out for themselves.

BILL: But it is terrible. We are old, we have sorrow too, but we cannot feel it now. We cannot understand the young! (He taps his fist lightly but firmly on the top of the scarred old table, and says in sudden anger): Ah, curse the sea, curse this youth. My God!

MARIA: (Shaking her head at him in warning) You should not. When we were young we did not curse so much. We were young and happy . . . yes, but we are old now . . . This youth

ERIC: These young ones feel too easily. It is always so, and we old ones must shelter them. Like little birds in a nest, they are.

BILL: But when she hears what will she do?

MARIA: I will keep my eyes on her she will forget soon, too.

BILL: Hurt easily; heal easily; forget easily. That is youth. (He raised his hands flung them outward in a gesture of despair). We are too far from her.

ERIC: Why did it happen? Why not to one of us? We are ready too long ready.

ERIC: (Hearing Katrina's voice singing): My God!

MARIA: She comes and so happy!

KATRINA: (Entering from the left, a small glass mug swinging loosely from her fingers. She catches sight of Bill, places the mug carefully on the bar and hurries over to greet him) Bill! Where have you been? Why have you not come more often?

BILL: Katrina! Ah, you are more beautiful than ever. (He stands back to look at her).

KATRINA: You are crying, old fool! So many tears, and why? For nothing.

BILL: No. It is only the old ones there. (He nods his head towards the two old people at the table)

RAZORBACK

They are so happy and so old. It makes me weep to see their foolishness.

KATRINA: But you should laugh, like me.

BILL: I am too old to laugh happily, so I weep. And I love you. That sailor boy, pah! (Jokingly) He is lucky! He is bad for you too; he makes you too beautiful, too happy. You love him too much.

MARIA: (Unable to bear the strain any longer becomes suddenly hysterical, and bursts into a scream, which almost at once subdues into a forced but well controlled command). Katrina! Go! Let us drink. Fetch the beer! (Eric, who has stood up and put out his hands to restrain any further outburst from Maria, goes behind her chair and lays a hand on her shoulder, as Katrina, mystified, goes out the small door at left. Bill, meanwhile has buried his head in his arms, and remains suspended thus upon the little table).

BILL: It is terrible! Suddenly he raises his head, unseeing of his friends and brings his hands before him dazedly, swings them slowly outward, and drops them to his sides). They are gone, like that, phoo

(At this instant the door at Center swings open and Gretchen stumbles through, and remains there clinging to the door to save herself from falling. The two men look up, startled. Marie rises and hurries over to her).

GRETCHEN: Ach, Mein Gott, haff you heard? What shall I do? Oh, me in leiber Paul, mein leiber Paul! (Marie supports her and leads her over to the table, where she sits down with her head in her arms. Her sobs shake the table. Marie caresses her gently).

MARIA: My poor child. We have heard . . . we know. It is terrible. (Maria glances appealing at the men, begging wordlessly for aid. But they sit helplessly, and she explains to them that:) It is Gretchen. Her Paul was on the ship . . . and her with child too. (She shakes her head sadly).

ERIC: What will come after? This love, what misery it brings . . . what hell . . . what happiness. (Then they hear Katrina approaching, singing).

BILL: My God, Katrina. She will hear! I will take her home, quick.

MARIA: No, I will go . . . (To Gretchen) There, there, my child, we will go home now. We weep too much . . . we love too much . . . but we forget . . . we forget. (Her voice has taken on a sort of rhythmic song, resembling the wail of a savage, of the lullaby of a mother to her child).

They go out slowly, Maria supporting Gretchen. Katrina comes in the door at left just as they disappear through Center. The two old men are nervous, doubtful of their ability to carry on the farce).

KATRINA: Where is my aunt? (The two old ones turn toward her. Eric hesitates, starts to speak but is silenced by Katrina). Ah, I know, she goes to make a surprise to him! (She rubs her finger gently along Eric's back). You are so good to me. (She goes slowly over to the bar and begins to put it in order. Her activity however is mostly nervousness. She must find some way in which to pass the time. At this moment a sailor lurches through the door at Center. He stands gaping for a moment in the semi-darkness of the place and then catches sight of Katrina).

SAILOR: Scuse me, I wanna drink. (He catches sight of a bottle on the edge of the bar and seizes it). Pretty, pretty. (He drinks with long gurgling gulps. Bill, meanwhile has come over and lounges against the bar close to him).

BILL: Ho, my friend, you have come early from the sea! (The sailor looks at him for a moment, places a friendly hand on his shoulder, winks ponderously and nods to Katrina).

SAILOR: Pretty girl, what? . . . you know her? Hic . . . 'scuse me. (Bill pushes his arms aside.) What, you ain't my frien'? (Garrulously). Nobody loves me . . . nobody loves me . . . I'm gonna die. (He looks winningly at Bill). You wouldn't wanna see me die, would you? (Shakes his head) Nobody loves me. (He raises the bottle, drinks and makes a wry face). Phew . . . hic . . . pretty girl. (He curls up his finger and sprawls across the bar). You look happy, kid. (This fact seems to irritate him for he bursts forth suddenly in anger). Happy! If you'd been with me you wouldn't be happy now. (He laughs bitterly). Big wreck . . . big one . . . (He waves his arm wildly and crashes the bottle to the floor, stops his tirade and looks solemnly down upon the wreckage). Now ain't that too bad . . . poor little glass . . . wreck . . . too. Naughty, naughty. (He bends over drunkenly and waves a crooked finger at the fragments on the floor. Finally he loses his balance and falls against Bill who catches him). Big wreck . . . dead men . . . (He goes off into a wandering muttered dialogue of which no words can be heard).

ERIC: (Half rising from his chair). My God. That fool. Stop that fool! (Katrina has now come to notice the tenseness of her two old friends and a sudden fear comes into her face. She becomes suspicious).

KATRINA: What ship? What was the name of it. What was it, I tell you? (She reaches out frantically and grasps the sailor by the front of his blouse, shaking him harshly).

SAILOR: Less see . . . (He looks stupidly at her). Betsy Ross . . . Naw . . . Betsy somepin . . . Now a'n't that funny? (He looks appealing at Bill). Betsy . . . Bestsy . . . Jane . . . Thass it . . . Betsy Jane! Thass it . . . big wreck. (He breaks off now, frightened by the look in Katrina's face. Bill looses him and rushes to the side of Katrina who has slowly wilted against the wall. The old captain has sunk back into his chair and sits staring and helpless with frightened, bewildered eyes).

KATRINA: I see . . . I see . . . I was so happy . . . fool, you wouldn't tell me.

BILL: (Frantically) Yes, fools, fools. (He gathers her into his arms trying clumsily to comfort her).

KATRINA: But it can't be . . . it can't be . . . tell him it can't be!

(The doors opens and Maria comes in. She immediately sense what has happened and moves quickly over to the girl, pushing Bill aside and gathered into her arms. The sailor remains drooped over the bar staring stupidly at the group).

MARIA: My darling . . . it is alright. There, there, it is alright.

KATRINA: It can't be . . . he isn't dead . . . oh, he isn't . . . say he isn't. (She looks wildly up and sees the truth in Maria's face. She jerks away from her ambrace and sinks against the wall. There is silence in the room excepting for the steady beat of futile blows against the wall).

—FINIS—

A MAN, RATHER OLD

The lingering rays of a rather indifferent afternoon sun streamed through the window of his study and shone vaguely on the neat rows of books which reached to the ceiling. In the midst of this formidable array of erudition he sat, conscious only of the comfortable and soothing flow of his won thoughts. He was a striking figure, sitting there with one leg thrown carelessly over the other, his maroon corduroy lounging robe falling in graceful folds to his Russian house boots. The most distinguished forehead that I have ever seen, smooth as marble, was accentuated by white hair which swept into slight disarray against the back of his very high chair. His nose was thin, finely chiseled; his mouth sensitive and rather wide, and his eyes handsomely grey and keenly intelligent. On the whole it was a handsome, distinguished and slightly weary man who sat there late one afternoon contemplating his own past. In one thin aristocratic hand he held a cigarette which he had lighted and promptly forgotten.

As he sat there, conscious only of the lazy passing of time, he realized that he was an old man. He had known that for a long time, but had defiantly refused to admit it, even to himself, until the book was finished. His book! It had been the work of a lifetime; now it was finished and he had nothing to do but to die. Strange, he thought. He had never noticed it before, he had had no time to think of such uninteresting things. Now he would surely die, he thought. Before very long he would be quite dead.

Tenderly, he lifted a handsome volume which was bound in rich brown leather and lettered in gold from the table by his side. His thin fingers caressed the cover affectionately and slowly turned through the ponderous work, knowing all the while that his life itself was between the covers. It was, he reflected his life; a full rich contribution to learning. A complete and chronological history of mythology. The first of its kind ever to be written.

The cigarette burned his fingers and he extinguished the glowing stub in a roomy hammered silver bowl which was crowded with other crumpled cigarettes. Never, he thought had he smoked a cigarette completely; he lit them, held them in his left hand until they burned his fingers, then cast them aside and lit another, and repeated the process. He realized now that routine had characterized his whole life with the exception of this book. He had things to enjoy, things which were as available as a lighted cigarette which he held, and he had been as completely unaware of their existence until they insistently made themselves known as did the cigarettes; then he crushed them out. He had, people would say, completely neglected to live, but he knew they were horribly wrong. He had concentrated his efforts on one tremendous undertaking and he had got something done. One must not try too much, he thought, for after all, what is a smoked cigarette but an excuse to light another? And he had lit his cigarettes, but he had never smoked them.

He settled more comfortably in his chair. The anaemic sun slid down from his window into the rich earth of his garden. It was definitely twilight. (Twilight, he thought). He smiled as he lit another cigarette.

STORY, ENDING TRIVALLY

It was only ten o'clock, but everyone was confused. The tables and chairs had been pushed against the walls of the enormous dining hall, and several couples were making a stumbling attempt to dance. In the music of the orchestra which was playing there was probably less "time" than there was in the prodigious buzzing of incoherent conversation.

A man appeared in the middle of the hall while the big kettle drums boomed to attract the attention of the many standing and seated people who thronged the hall. Teetering back and forth on his heels he made a long speech, accompanied with frantic gestures. He made horrible grimaces; he perspired; he gaped; but no one even regarded him. The buzz of conversation grew in volume. His shoutings were entirely inaudible.

"A wedding. I thought there was to have been a wedding! False pretense . . . presents . . .

"Such sauce, such sauce, such sauce; I thought that I would never get that damned stuff down. And I didn't. I am still afraid that that old witch opposite me saw me spit that stuff out as I leaned down to pick up my fork the second time. Oh, well."

"My god. Disgusted. Utterably and consummately disgusted. Never. Ah! never. But you understand. I feel certain that you understand."

"What, for God's sake? What, for God's sake whatfor godsake, WHAT?"

"Ave Maria! Regard. Attend. Perpend. Melody there unquestionably is, and music, in the array of a woman's hair; a music of soft sad dolorous winds, roaming a desert at dusk. But, it is strange to think of these things when the hair is in the soup!"

"Uh! (poh!) such an one! Horrrrrribl' creechure. Dth! dth!"

"And Madame, I said, my dear, dear, may I say very dear madame; do you realize; if only you could realize; if, if, Good God! Madame, don't you, can't you, wont you understand? It isnt much I'm asking of you. For God's sake! Think! Don't you, can't you understand? But you know, you couldn't conceive of it, I know; you can't understand how absolute . . .

"Sterling, I'm quite certain that there was to have been a wedding! Will you go and see why there is no bride? And, oh yes, while you are about it you may as well ask about the bridegroom, too. A trival detail, but an important one. Yes, indeed, an important one. A verrry important one. But trival."

I forget the rest.

QUESTIONS

The sky is gleaming gray
And full of rain;
Before the end of day
I shall again
See water leap along
A slanting street
And hear the whispered song
When raindrops meet
With leaf on bush and tree.
I wonder will
The soft sweet scent of rain
Bring back to me
An old forgotten pain;
And will I see
Behind the shifting mist
A rain-wet memory
Of when we two first kissed?
But that is past
And put aside as dead;
Queer then that I
Remember things you said,
And can see now
That smile upon your lips
Like cherries on a bough.
Oh many times
I've known regret
And longed to see again
The face of one I can't forget
Before me in the rain.

Oct. 7, 1932.

Though every taper burns its wick away
And kingdoms rich in gold in ash lay waste;
Though birds have flown and died while in their haste
And wings of moths are burned to brittle gray,
And thunder storms come up and mock the day,
Making every flower a tomb to taste
The death of spring; and every dawn is laced
With terrible streaks of black; though all dismay,
Should fates pronounce a cursed destiny
Or spheres resound an Oracle of Woe,
I will not believe that fury sounds its voice,
Should wind enrage and drive the threatening sea,
Until my soul shall feel and heart shall know
That you are dead; till then I will rejoice.

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE UNIVERSITY OF ARKANSAS

FAYETTEVILLE

16 March, 1933

To the guardians of that portion of the Razorback which has heretofore been designated as "The Hog Wallow".

It seems that this year, as in the years past, there has been considerable misunderstanding between the editors and the censors of the Razorback in regard to what material should go into the "humor" section of the annual. The dilemma seems to be somewhat as follows: if the editors prepare what in their taste is proper (in respect to the tastes of the buyers of the annual) material for a humor section, strenuous objections are brought forth by the censors, and these objections prevail; if the editors prepare material which meets with the approval of the censors, the students are dissatisfied. This places the burden of the responsibility for this dilemma upon the peculiar tastes of the students who purchase the annual.

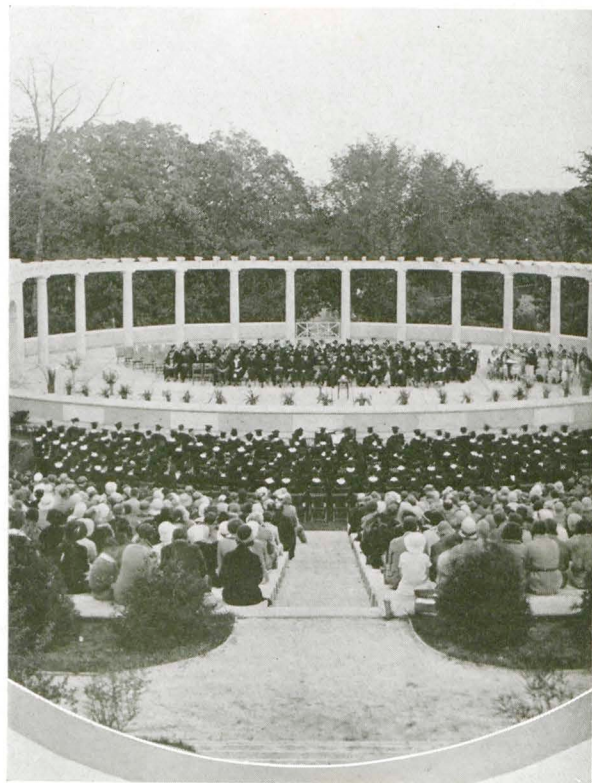

In view of these facts, and because the editors wish to maintain an harmonious condition of co-operation between themselves and the censors, we wish to make formal announcement of the fact that: because the university has no humor or literary magazine which might supply a medium for publication for the best of the literary talent which exists among the university student body, we wish to dedicate the final section of the annual-- 20 pages--- to the publication of the outstanding literary productions of the year 1933 by the students of the university.

A central editor will be appointed properly to notify such organizations as will assist in the selection of the outstanding literary achievements of the year, and to organize the materials which are selected. These articles, stories, plays, or poems which are selected will be duly submitted to the censors as appointed by the President.

It is hoped that this gesture may become a precedent for future editors of the university annual.

Copies to Dean Ripley,
Professor Mahan, and
Mr. Lemke.

Respectfully yours,
Don McLeod
